Highlands' government review underway

By Lisa Gervais

A former director of the Haliburton County EMS told Eastern Ontario Regional Network (EORN) consultants Tuesday (June 23) they could find municipal government efficiencies by consolidating roads, and fire, departments in the Highlands.

Bob English was one of about 20 people who attended an open house for an affordability and governance study that EORN is doing on behalf of the County of Haliburton.

His comments came after consultant, Maureen Adams, said one example of making local government more efficient could be centralizing planning services at the County level. Now, each municipality has at least one planner and some have junior planners.

English said it's been done for paramedics and is not about losing personnel, but rather "wanting to provide seamless service," with things such as standardized firefighting equipment, dispatch, and response times. He noted that now, some fire departments in the County can do water rescues, while some can only do shore rescues.

He said this could also be done with plow routes and parole yards.

Former County warden Chris Hodgson said because the County is small, the consultants must come up with a unique plan and then seek changed funding formulas from the province for things such as OPP billing.

Talk of consolidating services

Farmer Godfrey Tyler said one of the study's challenges is that there are two distinct societies in Haliburton County: those who were born and grew up there; and newcomers in the form of retirees, migrants, and refugees from urban areas. "Their interests are different."

Adams said they are also hearing from people that youth are looking to move elsewhere because there is nothing to keep them in the County.

Fellow resident Pamela Marsales wanted to know where the study was headed. Adams told her they are gathering feedback in June, then hoping to provide modeling options to the County at the end of July. It will be up to the County of Haliburton whether those models are taken back out to public meetings.

She noted nothing is predetermined; it could be status quo; amalgamation from two to single-tier or a modified approach, including talk of perhaps consolidating a couple of townships. She said they would come up with models, including costs, and service delivery levels.

EORN has been meeting with Highlands' residents all week as part of the study. Last week, they held engagement sessions with the County, Algonquin Highlands, Dysart et al, Highlands East and Minden Hills.

Jim Pine, of Jim Pine Consulting, Adams and Lisa Severson of EORN have been making the rounds.

"We really want to make sure people can participate as fully as they possibly can because we do want that individual reflection from people and we want to take advantage of group discussions ..." Pine told councillors.

He said the study is underway now because of growing fiscal pressures and challenging 2026 budgets.

EORN added the study will clarify each municipality's financial state and future pressures; analyze governance models; look at good examples from other areas; and set things up better for the 2026-2030 councils.

Adams said one of the greatest challenges for this area is the tax base is 98 per cent residential, which limits how much money municipalities can bring in. She noted the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC) has not done a property reassessment since 2016. Further, the average household income is 17 per cent below the provincial average.

Adams added Haliburton County relies heavily on a tourism-based economy with seasonal service demands. There are some high-cost services, such as OPP, that are beyond local control and federal and provincial infrastructure funding is unpredictable and insufficient.

Sewage expansion still two years away

By Mike Baker

Dysart et al council learned this week that it will be another two years before the proposed expansion of the Haliburton Wastewater Treatment Plant is complete, should it be approved by the Ontario government.

John Levie, vice president of engineering with Clearford Water Solutions – the firm that manages the plant for Dysart and was retained in January 2025 to oversee upgrades – told council June 23 that the project was still in the first of three planned phases, focusing on design and regulatory approval.

The project will increase capacity at the site, located between Grass and Head lakes in Haliburton village, by about 50 per cent. Levie said it will allow the township to provide sewer services to 800 additional properties. It's expected to cost about $14 million.

The plant is now running at 89 per cent capacity, about seven per cent more than when the process began two years ago. Levie said reservations for a proposed long-term care build on the township's 92-acre property on County Road 21 and some residential units in the downtown had almost maxed out available allocations at the plant.

He noted once a plant hits 80 per cent capacity, the Ministry of Environment, Conservation and Parks (MECP) require townships to start planning for expansion.

Over the past year, Levie said Clearford has completed all conceptual design work for the expansion. Equipment has been reviewed, with a wishlist of new materials established.

An application to increase the amount of treated water put back into the Lake Kashagawigamog chain will soon be submitted to the MECP for approval. Levie said he had hoped to get that in earlier, but he was delayed after a local group raised concerns over the project with the province.

John Puffer from the Lake Kashagawigamog Organization (LKO) said his group has worked with the Canning Lake Property Owners Association for the past few months to better understand the township's plans. He said the two associations are opposed to the expansion as initially proposed in 1989.

Levie noted that, when the plant was upgraded in the 90s, it was done with future expansions in mind. He said he expects MECP to support the project based on that early approval, as well as recent regulatory changes at the provincial level.

Puffer said the groups' primary aim is to prevent more phosphorous loading into the lake chain.

"We want to work with Dysart to ensure there is an overall plan to prevent more loading. This may require offering offsets including hooking up more lakefront properties to the plant," Puffer said, noting the sewage plant is more effective at keeping phosphorous at bay than individual septic systems.

Levie contends the Haliburton plant is already one of the top performing, environmentally-sound plants in the province. He noted the treatment process removes 98 per cent of carbon, 98-99 per cent of nitrogen/ammonia, and 97-98 per cent of phosphorous from the water.

Staff tests water quality weekly, with Levie telling The Highlander last fall he hasn't seen any major issues in his 21 years working at the site. Per the MECP, the environmental compliance approval for nitrogen/ammonia is 5 milligrams per litre, with phosphorous at 0.2 milligrams per litre.

Looking at annual data stretching back to 2021, Levie said the highest level of nitrogen/ammonia was recorded from January to August of 2024, at 0.06 mg/l, and the highest level of phosphorous in 2022 at 0.05 mg/l.

With the 50 per cent capacity increase, Levie said they'll be able to drop the concentration limit of phosphorous to two-thirds of what it is right now.

"This will provide additional assurances that lake water quality will be protected,"

Levie said.

He hopes to have that pre-consultation with MECP this summer or fall. Once that's completed, the formal application can be submitted. That will kickstart the technical review process, which can take up to a year. The second phase focuses on detailed engineering, another year-long process. Levie said he's hoping to complete that work while the technical review is underway.

The third phase is constructing and commissioning of the new system, which Levie estimates will take another year.

The township will be seeking government grants to help with the final bill, Levie confirmed.

County Road 21

Plans are progressing at the 92-acre property on County Road 21, with council learning at a June 16 special meeting that the township can extend sewer lines to the entire property, potentially increasing the number of units that can be developed.

"By extending municipal sanitary services, we could fit up to 90 (single family home) lots here with sewage connections. The only constraints then would be water capacity, whether there's enough water underground to service that many private wells," said consultant Evan Sugden.

There was some talk last week about whether council wanted to leave space for a public park. There's a requirement within the Municipal Act that says five per cent of a developable property needs to be reserved as parkland.

Currently, the 11.3 acres allocated as parkland equates to 12.2 per cent of the property. Coun. Pat Casey felt that was too much, wanting to see some of that land, fronting CR21, to be used for highway commercial development.

"I'm all about bringing in new businesses. We already have a big park in town. If we're trying to maximize density and looking at dollars spent versus dollars earned, then that highway commercial component is important," Casey said.

The township has committed to servicing the first phase of development at the site before selling to prospective builders. There will be more discussion on the project at a July 7 special meeting of council.

ALGONQUIN HIGHLANDS NEWS

Indigenous garden

Algonquin Highlands mayor Liz Danielsen has expressed disappointment over the length of time it's taken the township to follow through on its commitment to install an Indigenous garden at Tapscott Lopes Park in Dorset.

That was one of the conditions of the land transfer after Don Tapscott and Ana Lopes donated the Dorset pavilion and community park property to the municipality in February 2024.

At a June 18 meeting, Chris Card, the township's manager of parks, recreation and trails, told council he'd drafted a letter to be sent out to seven Indigenous communities, seeking guidance over what should be included in the garden.

"I am a little disappointed it's taken this long to get to this point given the commitment we made," Danielsen said. "This is year three and it would appear to me that we're not going to be able to prepare the garden [for opening] this year. That disappoints me."

Card said he is aiming to have the garden installed by September. He's been working with Four Directions of Conservation Consulting on the Indigenous component, which carried a $14,500 price tag. Garden materials and installation is expected to cost an additional $10,000.

He said the township was seeking advice from four Mississauga Nation communities – Alderville, Curve Lake, Hiawatha and Mississaugas of Scugog Island; and three Chippewa Nation sites – Beausoleil, Chippewas of Georgina Island and Chippewas of Rama.

Card said he envisions a 20-foot-by-20-foot garden that will function as a teaching space for Indigenous language, harvesting practices and seasonal cycles; a ceremonial site for gatherings, offerings and reflection; and a healing environment supporting physical, emotional and spiritual wellbeing.

"This garden will be rooted in the Indigenous belief that land is not a backdrop but a relative, teacher and source of identity," Card said. "We hope to choose plants not for aesthetics alone, but for their roles in medicines, foods and as cultural teachers."

Card noted First Nation communities will have up to three weeks to respond, with design work and plant list expected to come back to council in the fall for approval. While the grounds won't be "booming" with plant life this year, Card said the site will be prepared.

"At the very least if we can dig a flower bed and plant whatever is appropriate to be planted in the fall... I'd feel much better," Danielsen said.

Deputy mayor vote

Council has firmed up the process around deputy mayor nominations, with anyone seeking an appointment needing a second voice on council to support their claim.

In Algonquin Highlands, the public votes to elect a mayor and four councillors. During their first meetings following an election, council selects a deputy mayor, who serves as the township's second representative on County council. Jennifer Dailloux has served in the role since October 2022.

Clerk Dawn Newhook said council had to decide whether to allow members to self-nominate for the deputy role, which they did, and whether they require a seconder, which they do.

After coun. Sabrina Richards asked what would happen if all four councillors wanted to serve as deputy and wouldn't second one another, it was decided the mayor would be the deciding vote.

"Personally, I think the deputy mayor should be elected at large [by the public], but that's not on the table for discussion today," Danielsen said.

Home in boardroom and bush

By Lisa Gervais

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust (HHLT) has a new executive director.

The not-for-profit charitable organization said last week that Dave Newnham starts July 6.

Chair Todd Hall, on behalf of the board of directors, said, “Dave brings a strong commitment to Haliburton County, where he has lived intermittently since the late 1980s.”

Hall added Newnham has extensive leadership experience from his previous roles as vice president, camping and outdoor education with the YMCA of Southwestern Ontario and president and executive director of the Tim Horton Children’s Foundation.

Earlier in his career, Newnham worked at Kinark for several years as a supervisor and also at YMCA Camp Wanakita.

“Through all of his roles, Dave’s approach has been characterized by the development of strong new partnerships and community support, the creation of successful non-profit fundraising strategies, the inspiration of strong staff and volunteer teams, and the connection of Ontarians with nature,” Hall said.

He added Newnham was “comfortable in the boardroom and in the bush. Dave brings a wealth of experience to HHLT at an important moment. A proven and dynamic leader, Dave has long demonstrated both a commitment to the natural world, and a great talent in connecting people – especially children – to its wonder.”

As the land trust embarks on an ambitious phase of growth and service to the Haliburton community, Hall said he can’t wait to work with Newnham to maximize its positive impact. “As a full-time resident of Algonquin Highlands, Dave’s familiarity with the County ensures he can hit the ground running.”

Newnham said he was delighted to step into the executive director position with the land trust.

“It’s an inspiring opportunity to bring together my deep commitment to environmental stewardship, my background in leading not-for-profit organizations looking to make a real impact, and my love for the incredible natural diversity and the great sense of community here in the Haliburton Highlands.

“I look forward to meeting with our dedicated volunteers, supporters and members of the community to build on our success over the last two decades and work together to deepen our legacy of protected lands and waters for generations to come.”

HHLT is a not-for-profit charitable organization focused on the conservation of the natural heritage of Haliburton County, currently owning and managing seven nature reserves, comprising more than 1,500 acres, of ecologically-diverse lands and waters. Two of the properties have well developed trail systems that are free and open to the public for hiking and nature appreciation.

HHLT is presently working with other partners, including the Ontario Conservation Accelerator, to conserve more ecologically-sensitive land in the County with a 2026-27 goal of doubling land holdings, opening more public trails, and increasing the number of its partners in conservation.

HHLT’s board of directors and committees are made up of volunteers.

Hall said, “we welcome your support. Please consider joining our Friends of HHLT group, volunteering on a committee or at an event, becoming an HHLT property monitor and/or making a financial contribution. Help protect the land and water you love.”

Man dies after bridge diving incident

By Mike Baker

The Haliburton Highlands OPP are continuing to investigate an incident in West Guilford on Sunday (June 21) that resulted in the death of a 38-year-old Algonquin Highlands man.

Police said they responded to a report of an injured person near a bridge on Stanhope Airport Road between All Seasons Court and Pine Needle Trail at 1:42 p.m. Cst. Rob Adams, in a media release, said the man dove from the bridge and struck a boat travelling on the water below.

The man was able to exit the water and make his way to a nearby residence, where they received medical assistance. Despite life-saving efforts, the man later died at the scene, police said.

Adams said local officers are still investigating with support from the OPP central region traffic incident management enforcement team. He’s asking anyone who witnessed the incident or caught it on camera to contact police at 1-888-310-1122.

Adams also encouraged people to keep safety top of mind when on or around water.

“Water safety remains a consistent seasonal focus for police each year. Waterways can present serious and often unpredictable risks, regardless of the location,” Adams said. “It’s important to remain aware of your surroundings, follow any posted signage and recognize that conditions above and below the surface may not be as they appear.”

The Highlander has confirmed the identity of the deceased as Kale Kyle. In a Facebook post June 22, Cheryl Smith Hamilton of the Minden Mixed Baseball League (MMBL) said Kyle would be missed.

“The MMBL mourns the loss of one of our own. As captain of the Trash Pandas, Kale’s love for the game and dedication to his team will not be forgotten... I’ll miss our weekly chats,” she said.

County heading for fewer councillor acclamations

By Lisa Gervais

Municipal election races are starting to heat up in the Highlands.

As a result, the public will have choices when it comes to mayor of three of the four townships.

Incumbent Minden Hills mayor Bob Carter has filed his nomination papers. He will try to maintain his seat while three others: current councillor-at-large Tammy McKelvey, current coun. Pam Sayne, and Minden businessman Pat Kitcheman try to replace him.

Incumbent deputy-mayor Lisa Schell now has opposition, with Ivan Ingram switching to council's second in command, from Ward 1.

The councillor-at-large job will see a race between incumbent Bob Sisson and former coun. Ron Nesbitt.

Ward one is represented by two councillors, and sitting member Shirley Johannessen is running again. She is being challenged by Dan Garbutt.

Ward 2 has a new contender in Brad Griffin squaring off against Stephen Hertel, who has unsuccessfully run in the past. And Ward 3 currently has one contender: Jeff Hancock from Iroindale.

Dysart et al has a mayor's race, with current coun. Pat Casey seeking the top job, opposed by Greg Bishop and Andrew Nowell.

Walt McKechnie is so far the only contender for deputy mayor. Ward 1 sees Danny Roberts so far squaring off against Rob McCaig; Mike Waller is the only candidate as of now for Ward 2; Tammy Donaldson gets a run for her money in Ward 3 with Geoff Webber and Marianne Schlottke seeking that seat; Carm Sawyer is so far alone for Ward 4; and ward five sees a challenge for Barry Boice from Kirby Bagg. Nancy Wood-Roberts is not running.

In Highlands East, it's so far a two-person race for mayor with incumbent Dave Burton being challenged by Steven Kauffeldt.

There are no races yet in the other wards. Bill Easton has filed for Ward 1; Angela Lewis for Ward 2; Cecil Ryall for Ward 3 and Ruth Strong for Ward 4. Cam McKenzie is not seeking re-election.

In Algonquin Highlands, it's a slow start to the election. So far, only incumbent mayor Liz Danielsen and Ward 2 coun. Lisa Barry have filed. Deputy major Jennifer Dailloux is not running. Results are as of noon June 24.

The last day to file a nomination is Friday, Aug. 21, by 2 p.m.

Get involved in study

The affordability and governance study currently underway in the County is the most important thing this term of council is dealing with.

If you are unaware of the study, let us catch you up. The County of Haliburton has hired the Eastern Ontario Regional Network, or EORN, to look at ways to simplify government processes and provide better value for taxpayers.

While some think this means amalgamation, it may not. Nothing has been predetermined. There could, for example, be a series of shared service agreements.

Last week, the EORN team met with all five municipalities: the County, Algonquin Highlands, Dysart et al, Highlands East and Minden Hills.

This week, they have been holding open houses: beginning with ones Tuesday (June 23) at the Haliburton Legion; and later, the Lloyd Watson Memorial Community Centre in Wilberforce. Yesterday (June 24), they held a virtual open house. And, today (June 25), there are gatherings at the Dorset Recreation Centre in Algonquin Highlands from 2-4 p.m. and the Minden Hills Community Centre from 6-8 p.m.

Time is also winding down on a public survey that must be completed by June 28 at wadein.haliburtoncounty.ca. There are also paper copies at municipal offices and libraries. We urge you to take the 10 minutes or so to provide your input.

We cannot stress enough that the public, whether you are a businessperson or resident, needs to take part in this process if you want to see change.

And, although the current councils are offering their ideas, they are not the ones who will decide what change could look like moving forward. Rather, it will be the councils of 2026-2030 that will help determine our political future.

For that very reason, you should want to know what candidates for the fall election think about this study. What is their vision for the future of County affordability and governance?

At The Highlander, for a long time we have argued the status quo cannot remain. Having five governments, and 32 political positions [24 elected with eight of them on County council] for a population of just over 20,000 does not compute.

Having four lower-tier governments with four different sets of rules and regulations has not served us well. While the towns are playing better in the sand box these days, they still go off in different directions, creating angst for businesses and the general public. It is not efficient.

There were wake-up calls for all levels of local government in their 2026 budgets. They cannot afford to continue the way they have been. The tax base is 98 per cent residential, which limits how much money can be brought in. The average household income is 17 per cent below the provincial average. We have high-cost services, such as OPP and social services. Those costs are not going down, but up, and in some cases double-digit up.

We are encouraged by the number of people who are filing for this election. We need to ensure the electorate is engaged as well.

Please take part in this study.

World Cup fever

I blame my cultural heritage for this, being from England, but I feel like I turn into a kid on Christmas every time the World Cup comes around.

The soccer tournament, which runs every four years, is being held in North America. Games are being played in 16 cities across Canada, the U.S. and Mexico, with the monthlong celebration running from June 11 to July 19.

It's the first time the global competition has been played on these shores in more than 30 years, after the U.S. hosted in 1994. It's been an interesting watch thus far.

Traditionally, the World Cup featured 32 teams, but this year is bigger than ever before, with 48 nations included. Four countries are making their debut, with Cabo Verde, Curacao, Jordan and Uzbekistan competing in their first tournament.

As one of the host nations, Canada is involved too. This is only the third time Les Rouges has appeared in the event. They made their World Cup bow in Mexico in 1986 and played in Qatar in 2022.

The reds have turned heads thus far. The team kicked things off in Toronto June 12 with a 1-1 tie with Bosnia and Herzegovina, securing their first point at a World Cup.

I watched the game at a cottage in Burks Falls, where I was staying with 10 others for a friend's bachelor party. I was the only one watching for the first 10 minutes. Then I coaxed someone over with a bag of chips – they made sure to point out that, to them, soccer wasn't on the same level as hockey, basketball, and baseball. In terms of excitement, they put it on par with lawn bowling.

Fast-forward to the 78th minute, when Canada forward Cyle Larin tied the game at 1-1, and that same person was screaming and shouting in celebration of the goal. He wasn't alone. By that point, we were all circled around the TV.

This past weekend, I was at a wedding in Georgina. I struck up conversation with two guys watching the Germany-Ivory Coast game on their cell phone outside the church after the service. I've always found soccer to be this universal language with a unique power to bring people together. It's known as the world's game for a reason.

Just like four years ago, I've had double the fun so far – cheering for two teams. Both England and Canada are top of their respective groups through two rounds of play. They've both qualified for the knockout stage, but doing so top of the group should, theoretically, give both favourable match-ups in the first knockout round, which begins June 28.

As things stand, my two home nations are on a collision course to meet in the quarter finals. Though, they both have to win two elimination games before that point. It's unlikely, but possible.

So, who do I cheer for if that eventuality comes to pass? Hand on heart, probably England. But it'd be one of those games where I'd be fine with whoever won.

Because of the later kick-off times, I've been able to watch most games so far. I was disappointed by the exorbitant cost to attend matches in-person. A friend and I saved for years so that we could follow the England team for the tournament – the warchest, I thought, would get us to at least one round robin game and, hopefully, multiple knockout ties. Then FIFA revealed its price structure a little over a year ago and we had to pivot.

So, as well as watching at home I've been taking in games at various establishments. Boshkung Social in Minden has been showing games, as has McKeck's in Haliburton. I've heard both have gotten decent crowds.

While Canada has invested great sums as host, up to $1 billion in public funds, there has been some payoff. The County's tourism manager, Angelica Ingram, said fans travelling to Toronto for games are also venturing north to Haliburton County, bringing much-needed tourism dollars into the community.

For those watching, I hope you're enjoying the games just as much as I am. Go Canada and go England!

LETTERS

Gratitude and respect

Dear editor,

Haliburton County recently lost one of its most dedicated and respected community leaders with the passing of Murray Fearrey on May 28.

For more than five decades, Murray served the people of Dysart et al and Haliburton County with unwavering commitment, becoming one of the longest-serving municipal politicians in Canada.

His contributions to our region extended far beyond council chambers and municipal meetings. Murray believed deeply in community, collaboration, and the importance of creating opportunities that would strengthen the place we all call home.

At CanoeFM, we remember Murray as an early supporter of community radio and local media. He served on the station's board of directors during the 2003-04 year, when CanoeFM was taking its first steps as a new broadcaster. Those were exciting and challenging times, and Murray was among those who recognized the importance of having a local voice dedicated to sharing community news, local stories, music, and events.

Murray understood that strong communities depend on communication and connection. He appreciated the role that local organizations, volunteers, and community media play in bringing people together and helping residents stay informed and engaged.

Today, more than 20 years after CanoeFM first went on the air, we continue to benefit from the vision and support of community builders like Murray. His willingness to give his time, knowledge, and encouragement helped establish foundations that continue to serve residents across Haliburton County.

On behalf of the board, volunteers, staff, and listeners of 100.9 and 97.1 CanoeFM, we extend our heartfelt condolences to Donna, his family, friends, colleagues, and all those who had the privilege of working alongside him.

Murray leaves behind a remarkable legacy of public service, community spirit, and leadership. He will be remembered with gratitude and respect.

Governance and affordability study

Dear editor,

The right questions are being asked by the County under the affordability and governance review.

To date, their data shows residents' top concerns are the cost of living, rising taxes, and a need for real change. That signals change is required, but what change?

Broaden the base. Residential properties carry the majority of the assessment, with too small a commercial base to share the load.

In Haliburton, that weight falls heavily on waterfront owners. You don't fix affordability by leaning harder on the same ratepayers. Actively recruiting new commercial and year-round investment to broaden the tax pool is the fix.

Protect core services. Thirty-five per cent of the 2026 tax increase moved outside of Haliburton (half to the City of Kawartha Lakes), no matter how we are governed. In the County's words, local priorities are being left behind.

Spend in proportion to who pays. If the group generating the most assessment simply subsidizes the rest, that is called redistribution. Not reform.

Cottage owners who pay significant taxes should be asking how proposed changes will affect them. If the plan is to fix the County's math by shifting the burden rather than broadening the base, why bother? If cottagers are to keep funding the base, can they expect a softening of the rules and delays that make it challenging to spend that money locally to build and renovate how and what they want by hiring Haliburton contractors?

There's an election this fall. Ask every candidate the harder questions, not what you've done, but how. What's your plan, your timeline, your track record for growing non-residential assessment? Make them show you. Make them commit in writing.

Resident wants crosswalk

Dear editor,

I was disappointed to learn that the approved crosswalk on Bobcaygeon Road may not move forward despite receiving council approval.

Much of the discussion has focused on the loss of four parking spaces, potential traffic delays, and whether the crossing would be used enough.

While these are valid considerations, they should not outweigh public safety. Residents have raised concerns about near misses, aggressive driving, and feeling unsafe when crossing the road. The experiences of those who regularly walk downtown deserve careful consideration. Some residents may choose not to use the crosswalk, but that does not diminish its value for those who would. Its purpose is not to eliminate every crossing elsewhere, but to provide a safer option where one is needed.

Some have suggested that because there have been no pedestrian fatalities, the project may not be necessary. However, safety measures are meant to prevent tragedies, not respond to them after they occur. The absence of a tragedy today does not remove our responsibility to reduce risks before one happens.

Supporting Minden's downtown requires infrastructure that helps people feel safe and welcome. Streets designed with pedestrians in mind encourage residents and visitors to walk and explore local businesses. A successful community is not measured solely by parking availability or traffic flow. It is measured by how safe, connected, and welcoming it is for the people who live, work, shop, and visit there.

Council has already recognized the value of this project by approving it. Moving it forward would demonstrate a commitment to building a stronger, safer, and more welcoming Minden.

Clarifying Eastmure honour

Dear editor,

Curtis Eastmure recently received a well-deserved County accessibility award. As chair of the board of our Northern Lights theatre, he responded promptly to a presentation by a member of Aging Well Haliburton County who requested hand rails for the aisles of the theatre as a needed safety and accessibility measure.

Patrons over the proceeding years have responded gratefully. Aging Well Haliburton County was the group which put his name forward for the award, and which had originally urged the need for the hand rails in the theatre.

Aging Well, as it was known, was a volunteer group supported by the health unit and the family health clinic. Begun in 2007, this group initiated a County-wide seniors' needs study. With this information, goals beyond fall prevention were set.

A master plan to aid municipal planning based on World Health Organization criteria for older adults was funded and published. Responding to the critical need for housing, Aging Well sponsored a wide-scale housing summit in 2019, which included housing experts, new research and information. And in 2020, a retirement workshop featuring an excellent updated brochure, which was funded and locally scheduled.

Then COVID hit. Aging Well Haliburton County was one of many worthwhile voluntary organizations Country-wide that did not survive the pandemic. Aging Together as Community, a new volunteer group, sprang to energetic life during COVID in partial response to the public scandals involving long-term care. They offer social and informational programming to Haliburton area older adults.

*Margery Cartwright

Clarification: our story last week said Aging Together as Community initiated the work. It was Aging Well Haliburton County. We apologize for the error.

Regarding those ads

Dear editor,

Why are people being so mean-spirited about those ads from the Ford government?

Sure, they are making Ontario safer by building more jails, but folks should understand that if the premier's and the cabinets' phone records get subpoenaed, he and some of his associates may be sharing this new accommodation. They're just making sure there are some executive cells with all the mod cons, available to them.

It's a win-win for Ontario.

Local student brings a taste of Finland to County

By Lisa Gervais

This Canada Day, local student entrepreneur Kendra Korpela will officially open the doors to KissaMoon, a Finnish-inspired pop-up shop offering a unique selection of Finnish treats, gifts, and treasures in downtown Haliburton.

Located inside Sourdough & Sausages, KissaMoon is the result of Korpela's participation in Ontario's Summer Company program, which helps young entrepreneurs start and run their own businesses.

KissaMoon will feature Finnish chocolates, candies, snacks, gift items, and other carefully selected products that celebrate Scandinavian culture and heritage.

"Finland has always been an important part of my family's story," Korpela said. "I wanted to create something that shares a little piece of that culture with our community while gaining real-world business experience."

The shop's name combines the Finnish word kissa (cat) with a moon motif inspired by Korpela's beloved cat, Dobby, who has become the unofficial mascot and self-appointed CEO.

As a recent high school graduate preparing to attend Georgian College this fall, Korpela has spent the past several months developing her business plan, building a website, sourcing inventory, creating marketing materials, and preparing for opening day.

"We're excited to bring something a little different to Haliburton," she said. "Whether you have Finnish roots, have visited Finland, or are simply curious to try something new, there's something for everyone at KissaMoon."

KissaMoon officially opens on July 1, and will be open Wednesday through Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Best opera chops up for national prize

By Mike Baker

Highlands Opera Studio (HOS) is celebrating its 20th anniversary in a big way in 2026, with a packed schedule of community performances around the County in August, and the unveiling of a new nationwide competition for opera singers.

Valerie Kuinka, co-artistic director at HOS with her partner, Richard Margison, said registration for the inaugural Vanda Treiser Opera Competition launched on Monday (June 22). Geared towards those who have spent years cultivating their talents, it's open to Canadian citizens and landed immigrants who will be 21 or older as of Oct. 11.

Kuinka said opera singers of all voice types can apply, with the competition carrying a prize pool of $12,500. That's courtesy of a donation from the Vanda Treiser Initiative, Kuinka said.

Based in Quebec, Treiser is the co-president of the Canadian Arts Vocal Institute and has spent years working with the Opéra de Montreal. Kuinka said Treiser has also made major contributions to HOS over the years.

"The impact of Vanda Treiser's commitment to young Canadian opera singers and the many years of support she has provided HOS and other organizations in Quebec cannot be overstated," Kuinka said. "Although she's not part of the local community, Treiser understands the necessity of supporting the year-round community school we have."

She added, "this new annual competition will add another opportunity to showcase the incredible talent of Canadian operatic artists and offer some financial support to a few of the many accomplished Canadian classically-trained singers striving to make a career at home and abroad."

Kuinka said Treiser has financially supported professional training and career development opportunities for many local people since HOS was formed in 2007.

"We are absolutely thrilled to honour Vanda... we are deeply grateful for this remarkable and visionary woman," Kuinka said.

Once registrations close, Kuinka and Margison will assess all video applications and select up to eight finalists, who will be invited to present two arias live at Trinity-St. Paul's United Church in Toronto on Oct. 11. Kuinka said the singers will perform for a five-person jury, with each finalist given

First place will win $5,000, with second taking home $3,000 and third place getting $1,500. All other finalists will receive $500, with another $500 earmarked for an audience choice award.

Kuinka said, each summer, HOS provides specialized professional training for emerging Canadian operatic artists, including singers, pianists, composers and production personnel. They are put through a four-week course in the County, culminating in live performances for the community.

Running Aug. 3 to 31, Kuinka said this year there will be 18 program participants at 13 public events. On Aug. 16, HOS is hosting a homecoming concert at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton to mark its 20th anniversary.

"We will have alumni from our first year right up until last year participating, including a celebrity host," Kuinka said. "We'll also be doing an encore of the 'Let's Make Opera' community project we did last year. That will be taking place Aug. 19 at the high school theatre, so, for those who missed it last time, this is your chance to see it."

Other highlights of this year's schedule include a rendition of Puccini's 'Suor Angelica', performed by Lauren Margison Aug. 22 and four performances of Donizetti's 'Don Pasquale' Aug. 27 to 31.

Folk Society artists for 2026–27 season

By Lisa Gervais

The Haliburton County Folk Society (HCFS) has announced its artist line-up for the 2026-27 concert series.

The reveal was on CanoeFM last Thursday (June 18) with Sue Shikaze joining Don Gage, co-president of HCFS, and Kris Kadwell, host of Paddling Beyond the Mainstream. They announced the artists, talked a bit about why they chose them, and played selections of their music.

The upcoming series features Juno award-winning and nominated artists, a range of genres, original music, and storytelling, as well as well-established artists and up-and-comers who are just beginning to make their mark on the Canadian music scene, Shikaze said.

“Whether you’re familiar with the names or not, you can be sure that you’ll leave as a fan of each performer, continuing the HCFS tradition of presenting the best of Canadian music right here in the Haliburton Highlands,” she added.

The series kicks off with Juno award-winning band Kobo Town. Formed and fronted by Drew Gonsalves, originally from Trinidad, Kobo Town brings distinct calypso and ska-inspired sound to the Haliburton Legion Oct. 3.

The second show is someone the HCFS is catching at the beginning of what they think promises to be a stellar career in music. Irish Millie is a singer, songwriter and fiddle player from Peterborough who takes the stage Nov. 14 at the Highland Hills United Church.

At just 19 years old, Millie is already making a name for herself. Her music is a high-energy blend of East Coast drive, bluegrass edge, and contemporary trad with a distinct Celtic pop rock energy. She is a seven-time Canadian Folk Music Award nominee, including two 2026 nominations for young performer of the year, and single of the year.

Show number three is York Street Thought

Process, who will kick off February Folk Fest Feb. 6, 2027 in the club room at the Haliburton Legion. York Street Thought Process is duo Jaron Camp and Rachael Frankruyter. Shikaze said they have captured the hearts of audiences across Canada with their playful approach to folk music, blending strong storytelling with improvisation. They have performed at the Mariposa Folk Festival and Winnipeg Folk Festival, proving they’re on their way to establishing themselves in the music scene. They caught the attention of HCFS at the 2025 Folk Music Ontario conference, where they were part of the emerging artist program.

On April 2, show number four at the Haliburton Legion features the Slocan Ramblers.

They are a Juno-nominated bluegrass band rooted in tradition, fearlessly creative with a bold, dynamic sound, who have become a leading light of today’s acoustic music scene, Shikaze said. The Slocans performed in the County in 2015, and Shikaze noted they are excited to welcome them back “with their energetic live show, impeccable musicianship and an uncanny ability to convert anyone within earshot into a lifelong fan.”

The series wraps up with singer-songwriter Martin Kerr June 5, 2027 at Highland Hills United Church. Martin is a folk troubadour “for the post-truth age. His outspoken and poetic takes blend urgent issues of the day with deeply personal narratives, in honest and nostalgic folk arrangements that invite you to sing along,” the folk society said.

He has done some controversial rewrites of classic songs like God Rest Ye Merry Billionaires, Away in Bomb Shelters, and What’s Up America? being adopted as anthems for justice and democracy. Shikaze is expecting a captivating live performance, peppered with Martin’s dry British humour.

Series passes, and tickets to individual shows, are available at haliburtonfolk.com.

Adding beauty to Haliburton's main street

By Mike Baker

Visiting artists from across Ontario have helped spruce up Haliburton's main street for the summer, with seven new creations unveiled last week as part of the annual downtown sculpture exhibition.

Now into its eighth year, the exhibition serves as a standalone accessory to the Haliburton Sculpture Forest said longtime curator, Jim Blake. The idea is that people spot the pieces in the downtown and take time to analyze and reflect on what each creation means to them. Even better if it directs people to the sculpture forest, located within Glebe Park, Blake said.

"I just love coming down the street and seeing the sculptures here. It's one of those things where some people may not notice them, but for those that do they really seem to love them," Blake said. "It really brightens up our downtown and gives it some character."

This year's show features one local submission and six pieces from artists from Toronto, Guelph, Mono, Erin, Elora and Douro. Blake said there were 24 applications from 17 artists.

He noted the jury always thinks about "what will look best on our main street" and take into account artistic merit, structural integrity and ability to withstand natural elements, being located outside for several months. The exhibit was installed last Thursday (June 18) and will remain in place until Oct. 25.

The tour begins at Rails End Gallery and

Arts Centre with Jenn Wanless-Craig and Terry Craig's 'Delicate Nature', a 49-piece display where they recreated wildflowers like milkweed, black-eyed Susan and fireweed in glass form.

The Tory Hill couple have been glassblowing for several years and usually spend their summers on the provincial arts and craft show circuit, but an injury to Terry earlier this year altered their plans.

Wanless-Craig said their piece is "something we decided to do for ourselves, to make us feel alive again." She said the idea was to shine a light on the beauty of wildflowers that most take for granted.

"These flowers are beautiful but are often overlooked or discarded. We wanted to work with the colours to make them really stand out," Wanless-Craig said, noting they used deep shades of pink, purple and yellow.

Toronto's Jungle Ling has been an artist for almost 30 years, with his first public mural completed in 1999. Blake said he's seen Ling's work in the city for years, with an archway close to a parkette where Blake has a property a particular highlight.

Ling's 'The Squatter' is installed on the corner of Highland and York streets, near the Cenotaph. It's made completely from reclaimed steel Ling found at the city dump.

In front of Wind in the Willows sits 'The Bird Woman' from Holly Atkinson. While she typically works with bronze, having worked in a foundry for more than 32 years, the artist said she merged wood, cement and steel rod for the foundation and utilized different textiles and paints to finish.

"It's painted four different colours on each side to represent different types of bird," Atkinson said.

Angela Burdon will be a familiar name to fans of the exhibit, with her 2025 piece 'Botanical Canoe' popular last year. This time, she used winterstone for 'Choose Life, Choose Love' located in front of Fiore Verde. She said the sculpture is a commentary on how youth today are influenced by violent video games and negative news stories.

One interesting element, Burdon said, is that she expects it to change colour over the summer.

"The paint I used has a bronze powder ground into it. So, as it's exposed to the elements – the sun and the rain, the piece will keep evolving," Burdon said.

Rosalinde Baumgartner has also featured in the exhibit before and entered her painted clay sculpture 'Georgina', located in front of the Bank of Montreal. Michelle DuQuesnay's 'Echo of Wilderness' can be found in front of Algonquin Outfitters, with two Garrett Gilbert steel sheet pieces, titled 'Corvus', at Corner Gallery.

Blake confirmed all pieces are available to purchase, with pricing available at www.haliburtonsculptureforest.ca.

Dysart fire truck found in ghost town

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

For longtime Haliburton cottager Andrew Dunsmore, making a pitstop on a lengthy road trip is a part of the journey. But when he decided to take a break and stretch his legs during a trip out west, it turned into a mind-bending brush with home.

While on an RV trip from Calgary to Vancouver with his friend Robert Barnes in May, the pair decided to take a break at Three Valley Gap Lake Chateau and Ghost Town, just outside of Revelstoke, B.C. The guys were just finishing up their walking tour of the historic, open-air museum when they came across a small collection of vintage vehicles, including fire trucks.

Dunsmore told The Highlander that he had walked right past the first truck on display without taking a second look. But Barnes, who had visited Dunsmore's family cottage many times, noticed a familiar word on the faded paint.

"Dysart," Dunsmore recalled his friend saying. "Isn't Dysart where Haliburton is?" The Toronto resident turned back to the truck and went in for a closer look.

"I looked at it, and I was just dumbfounded," Dunsmore said with a chuckle. "I was like, 'yes, absolutely. There can only be one Dysart.' And we went around and looked at the front of the truck, and there we could see the words Haliburton, which confirmed it. It absolutely blew my mind. You just don't expect to see anything to do with Haliburton in the middle of B.C."

Dunsmore said the discovery brought a wave of nostalgia over him and explained that while his family has lived all over Canada, Haliburton has always been their anchor. It's a place his mother still calls home.

"It didn't matter if we lived in Toronto or Montreal or wherever, we would always come back to the cottage for the summer. So it is sort of a second home for me," he said. "I know lots of local people just from having had summer jobs at the Pinestone and different places over the years."

While the truck's existence out west might surprise many ex-pats; its history is no secret to former Haliburton fire chief Miles Maughan, as he was the one who decommissioned the vehicle.

Purchased by Dysart et al in 1972, the truck served as a front-line pumper for about two decades before being retired in 1992. Maughan, who drove and operated the engine for 15 years, explained what happened to the truck after retiring it from calls.

"It was still operating, so a fellow in the County bought it because he thought he was going to set up a mobile washing centre with it," Maughan explained. "But he got a full-time job and didn't have time, so it kind of sat around for a couple of years there."

From there, the man sold the vehicle to a collector out west who operated a tow truck company. The B.C. collector brought a truck across the country to Ontario, picked up the retired Dysart pumper, and towed it all the way back to the province, Maughan explained.

Then, museum owner George Bell acquired the truck through some good old-fashioned bartering.

"I had a buddy back east, who got it out here," Bell told The Highlander. "I had some storage, he stored some stuff here, and then he threw the fire truck at me."

The 1972 pumper represented a specific era of firefighting technology with one feature that modern trucks no longer use, such as the quick-attack hose reel.

"In the picture you can see, they had a hose reel on them at that time," Maughan noted. "You could grab one of them hose reels, pull it out, and spray a fire down within minutes."

Today, the climate and natural elements have taken a toll on the old truck.

"The footwell, like where you would put your foot to hoist yourself up into the truck, it was nothing but rust," Dunsmore said.

Bell echoed Dunsmore's observations, noting that the mountain moisture has had its way with the former workhorse.

"Especially out here, we're in quite a moist area, so things deteriorate," Bell noted. The truck still features the original hoses it retired with.

"It's so good to get it right from the fire department because you get all the goodies," he said.

As for Dunsmore, he said that he was just thrilled to share the somewhat bizarre discovery with the County and to sort of surprise his mother when she opens the newspaper.

Calling all warriors to come out and play

By Mike Baker

Youth Unlimited Haliburton Highlands is trying to bridge the gap for low-income families wanting to enroll their children in hockey, launching a new grassroots club in Haliburton village.

The Haliburton Warriors Hockey Club will start playing this fall. Founder Leanne Young, who runs the Bridge Youth Centre in town with her husband, Kyle, said the team will feature boys from Grades 4-6 in its first year.

After putting her 10-year-old son through Highland Storm hockey for the past four seasons, Young said the cost and unrelenting schedule were taking a toll on her family. After talking to other moms throughout the season and connecting with hockey enthusiasts at public skates through the winter, she felt there was enough demand to support another program.

“We probably spent $4,000-5,000 this year on hockey for our one son, which is a lot of money. It also felt like driving became our entire lives. We were on the road three days a week at least,” Young said. “Now, my youngest son is getting to the point where he wants to start hockey and there’s no way we have the money or time to have two kids playing.

“With gas prices going up, it was costing us $20 to get to Gooderham and back. Then you have food to pay for, because games are always around dinner or lunch time,” she added.

She believes in the benefits of organized hockey – teaching kids about teamwork, respect and discipline. That will form the basis of the Warriors program, she said.

“I think if you teach boys how to be men of integrity, how to work together and be committed to something, then that definitely helps their future development,” Young said. “Since my son started playing, he’s speaking up more in class, he’s become a leader, confident and calm in tough situations. We’ve seen a big change in him.

“I see other boys needing that kind of positive influence. Kids have told me they want to play hockey but can’t afford it. We want to change that.”

The program will run for 16 weeks beginning Oct. 16. Sessions will run from 4 to 6 p.m. at A.J. LaRue Arena in Haliburton. The cost is $220 per person, with 24 spots available.

Volunteer Kelly Short will serve as lead coach with locals Steve Belanger, Graham Borgdorff and Paul Adams assisting. There will also be a couple of older teenagers from the Bridge helping out.

Short said the first half of the weekly meets will focus on skill development, with the second half on games and scrimmages. He coached with the Highland Storm for two years after moving to the Highlands in 2018 but found the travel to games to be too much.

He’s been volunteering with the Bridge Youth Centre for about a year, helping out with pancake breakfasts. He said he was happy to help on the hockey side after Young approached him earlier this year.

Short feels this new program is an ideal way for parents to introduce their children to hockey.

“Hockey is such a great team sport. It brings camaraderie, teaches many aspects of life they need to learn like hard work and respect,” Short said.

Young said the hope is to expand the program to other age groups, and girls, in the future.

CFN provides $2.1M in needed support

By Mike Baker

Central Food Network (CFN) delivered over $2.1 million worth of value to its clients across Highlands East via food packages, prepared meals, heating support, hydro assistance and free tax clinics in 2025-26.

Speaking at the organization's annual general meeting May 28, executive director Tina Jackson said it had been another challenging 12 months for CFN as staff and volunteers tried to meet the needs of struggling locals.

During the previous fiscal year, which ran April 1, 2025 to March 31, 2026, CFN fed an average of 260 people per month. In total, they assisted 670 different people – representing 17 per cent of Highlands East's population.

"That is significant and heartbreaking," Jackson said. "Beyond food insecurity, we are seeing dramatic increases in demand for other support. In many ways, 2025 felt like we were hit with a tidal wave, particularly in the heat bank program where calls for support increased 58 per cent."

After 25 years working in the sector, Jackson said she's never seen things as desperate as they are today.

"Organizations like ours have stretched every available dollar, volunteer hour and ounce of goodwill to respond to the growing community need. But the scale and complexity of that need continues to evolve rapidly," she said. "We expect concerns around food, fuel and energy affordability to deepen going into the latter part of 2026 and 2027."

The organization is in good shape financially to handle the load. As of its year-end, CFN had $180,000 in cash reserves – a $49,000 increase from last year. While expenses climbed to $314,000 from $272,000 year over year, revenues also went up 18 per cent to $355,000.

Jackson said 81 per cent of CFN's expenses were spent directly on programs, with 16 per cent on staff and three per cent on fundraising.

There were several key departures at the board level, with chair Nancy Wright-Laking stepping down after seven years of service and Christine Sharp after five years. They have been replaced by new recruits Kathy Smith, Dan Chan and Nicole Baxter Bradford, though Jackson said there's still room for more new blood.

"Board leadership can happen quietly behind the scenes, but those who put in the hours have a profound impact on their community. We're always looking for people to step forward," Jackson said.

Abbey Gardens pivoting towards wellness

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Abbey Gardens has unveiled a refreshed brand identity, pivoting toward a deep, nature-based wellness model to secure the organization's long-term sustainability in a post-pandemic economy.

The Haliburton Highlands' charitable organization rebrand is a shift away from high-volume visitation toward slow-paced, boutique programming.

"People are changing their habits," executive director Angela Kruger explained to The Highlander. "And things that are more meaningful to them have changed as well."

Kruger said that the rebrand is less about inventing something new and more about returning to the organization's roots.

"So I think that, in fact, what the rebrand is, is perhaps truer to what Abbey Gardens was right at the onset," she said. "We're kind of returning back to using nature as our teacher."

Kruger noted that the timing of the rebrand was strategic, with the changing of consumer habits post-pandemic, and the economic uncertainty, people are eager to seek more meaningful experiences.

"So our shift is to introduce experiences that kind of get people away from everyday life and just get them out enjoying nature," she said. "And, in fact, that's wellness, right? Wellness in nature."

While Abbey Gardens is a registered charity and remains free for the public to enter, in order to keep operations sustainable, the organization is leaning into its food hub and tourism background to create dedicated, paid revenue streams, with a series of slow-paced, immersive experiences.

People participate in a mushroom workshop at Abbey Gardens. Submitted.

These new experiences include forest bathing (Shinrin-yoku), hands-on mushroom workshops, and music in the forest. Kruger said a highlight of these programs is the community aspect. "Experience culminates in an intimate farm-to-table community meal, thoughtfully curated by Abbey Gardens' team and shared together on the porch.

"We'll be just, basically, expanding the immersive experience into the porch because everybody will be communal, eating together," Kruger said.

The meals are crafted by the in-house Abbey Gardens kitchen team, using produce grown on-site, as well as ingredients from local partners. The season's first event, Busiate alla Trapanese: A taste of Italy in the Haliburton Highlands, took place June 13 and was a sell-out.

Beyond culinary and wellness events, Kruger and Abbey Gardens' ecologist, Cara Steele, are working to finalize guided ecology walks and hands-on climate experiences designed to give visitors practical tools for their own properties, including demonstrations on alternate ground covers and native plant gardens built to withstand drought-like conditions.

"We have a ton of information and gardens that we can walk people through and show them what they can do on their own properties if they want to choose something to help protect the climate," Kruger said.

A new logo for Abbey Gardens was also created as part of its rebrand, which features lines that were inspired by the winding road through the property, the surrounding forests, and water. It's paired with the "living landscape" colour palette.

The executive director said that the rebrand sets the stage in the long term for a much broader geographical reach.

"This is setting the stage that we want to become a destination," Kruger said. "So, that will be leaning towards tourism and getting people on-site, sharing our landscape and our abundance of nature with urban areas. I think it's the start of a shift where we're maybe opening ourselves up to a broader area."

Immersive programming details and registration info can be found on the Abbey Gardens website.

Fabulously rich ice cream hits stores

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

He said, “I’m tragically... chip?”

Kawartha Dairy released its latest flavour on Monday (June 22), bringing together two iconic fixtures in Canadian culture, just in time for Canada Day.

The family-owned ice cream maker and legendary rock band The Tragically Hip partnered to release a limited-edition, premium ice cream concoction dubbed The Tragically Chip, a name the dairy’s head office said was an immediate frontrunner that the band approved right away.

Armed with will, determination, and grace too, customers lined up to get their hands on the maple whisky flavoured ice cream at the Minden Kawartha Dairy on Monday afternoon.

Kawartha Dairy and The Hip announced the partnership in mid-spring, which coincides with two notable milestones for the region, adding another feather in one’s fifty-mission cap. This year marks the 150th anniversary of the village of Bobcaygeon, as well as the 10th anniversary of The Tragically Hip’s historic final cross-country farewell tour with the late frontman Gord Downie.

According to Kawartha Dairy, the partnership was born from a mutual love of small-town Canada and summer memories by the lake.

“We are delighted to be releasing this amazing flavour in the same year as Bobcaygeon’s 150th anniversary because honestly, without Bobcaygeon, there simply wouldn’t be a Kawartha Dairy,” Mike Crowe, third-generation owner and director of product development, said.

The collaboration also relies on a shared history with Bobcaygeon itself. The dairy provider was founded in the town nearly 90 years ago. Fast-forward to the late ‘90s, the town served as inspiration for the Kingston rockers’ Juno award-winning song, Bobcaygeon.

While Kawartha Dairy said it proposed the initial concept, the surviving members of The Hip and their families were actively involved in taste-testing the final product to ensure it hit all the right notes.

For day trippers and cottagers alike, a trip to the County, and The Hip providing the soundtrack, a pitstop in Minden for some ice cream has been a long-time tradition.

“This is year 72,” Cathie Gauthier, a London, Ont., resident, told The Highlander. “My parents brought me up when I was three years old... that’s how long we’ve been coming.”

When asked what the ice cream parlour meant to her after all these years, Cathie summarized it as “summer and fun,” while her husband, Bob Gauthier, said it simply boils down to “tradition.”

The couple, who used to own property on Halls Lake and now rents regional properties, said that the Kawartha Dairy in Minden was the anchor point for the family.

“When our kids were small, the deal was we would go to church and they’d always come here after,” Bob recalled. “Two years ago, we were up here with our grandchildren and our daughter’s family. And it was the same deal, we went to church and came here.”

As for the new ice cream, it seemed The Tragically Chip was hitting all the right notes.

“It’s delicious so far. I mean, I’m a big fan of chocolate and cherries,” said cottager Janice Rose. And when asked which ingredient stands out the most, Rose noted: “Probably the whisky, I think.”

Moe Genore, a self-described “big Hip fan,” also acknowledged the distinct flavour of the ice cream.

“You can definitely taste the bourbon, so you can taste a bit of alcohol,” she said. “And then the cherries and chocolate chips, yeah. It’s very good.”

When asked to pick a Hip song that pairs with the bold flavour, Rose went immediately to the local connection.

“The first [song] that came to mind was Bobcaygeon,” she said.

Genore pointed to a different classic, suggesting that Blow at High Dough was a better match to the flavour.

The rollout of The Tragically Chip ice cream includes a charitable component, with Kawartha Dairy and the Hip donating a portion of retail proceeds from the flavour to the Breakfast Club of Canada, a national non-profit organization dedicated to funding school breakfast programs for children.

“Both The Tragically Hip and Kawartha Dairy have a history of supporting organizations that work to help make our communities stronger,” Crowe said. “As food insecurity continues to be an issue among Canadians, a portion of the sales of The Tragically Chip will support Breakfast Club of Canada and the amazing work they do to ensure Canadian kids have access to a nutritious breakfast.

The charitable aspect came as a welcome surprise to many customers. The Rose family, who actively volunteer making school lunches in the city, noted that the donation makes the product even more meaningful.

“They should advertise that more,” Rose said, adding that knowing the proceeds support the charity “absolutely” makes the ice cream taste sweeter.

ALL ABOUT HI, THE HIGHLANDER'S NEW APP

Why we made it

Three years ago, Meta banned Canadian media companies from Facebook and Instagram. Since then, the quality of information on these platforms has deteriorated. Instead of trustworthy news, there is misinformation, anger, and division. We believe that’s bad for Haliburton County.

We created this app to solve that problem: to make a space that is just for our community, without the downsides of social media.

What's on it

You’ll find verified, accurate news from our reporters, including breaking news alerts. You will also find information from local not-for-profits, service organizations and municipalities. The feed is in strict chronological order – there’s no algorithm to track or manipulate you.

How to get it

The best way is to go to thehighlander.app on your cellphone. On your first visit, you’ll get a message encouraging you to install the app on your phone. Click this and the app will appear on your home screen so you can easily find it again.

How to use it

You don’t need to create an account to use the app. But if you do, there are two benefits. First, you can choose which categories you want to see. Second, you can get notifications on your phone. There’s a breaking news category, so anytime there is something urgent and important happening in the county, you can be notified. To create an account, just follow the links on the screen.

Why you can't comment on it

We know you might enjoy commenting on Facebook. But a downside of comments is that misinformation can spread. Without moderation, which is an impossible job for us, the value of the app would be lost. The Highlander’s reporters are trained journalists, which means they follow rules so that what they post is as accurate as possible. They are also accountable because they live and work in our community. If they make a mistake, readers tell us – and we fix it. We hope that this approach will create an environment that is useful and pleasant.

How to advertise on Hi

We will be funding the app by offering a limited number of spots to local advertisers who want to reach people in Haliburton County. For more information, contact Aidan (aidan@thehighlander.ca).

How to give us feedback

Email Adam (adam@thehighlander.ca) or stop by our office in Haliburton village.

It's nicer here

Hi has a slogan: It’s nicer here. Imagine getting all your important news and information about Haliburton County from a trustworthy source. No algorithms, no trolls, no lies. Just 100% pure news and information. It’s calm and friendly. It’s real. Just like our beautiful Highlands. It’s nicer here.

Historic local landmark reopens for tours

By Mike Baker

For the first time in seven years, visitors to the Haliburton Highlands Museum will be able to learn all about, and see firsthand, the story of one of the community's early settlers, the Reid family.

The historic Reid House, constructed in 1882, reopened for tours over the May long weekend. Located on the museum grounds in Glebe Park, the exhibit unpacks the history of the home dating back to its original owner, John Russell Reid II, who was a carpenter in town.

He moved to Haliburton in 1871 with his parents, John and Amy, who emigrated from London, England.

"The Reid family never would have imagined in a million years that their story would be told in a museum... but theirs and the museum's paths are completely intertwined," said Kate Butler, the museum's director. "The earliest days of the museum were in this house. It's been part of our story all the way along."

Descendants of the Reid family lived in the house until the 1960s, when it was put up for sale by Jean Reid, widow of John Reid III. Haliburton Rotary fundraised to buy the property, located near where the tennis courts are in Head Lake Park, wanting to turn it into a museum. It opened in 1968.

The museum ran for a dozen years in its old location overlooking Head Lake. Then known as the Haliburton Highlands Pioneer Museum, each room was a tribute to a prominent family from the town's early beginnings, Butler said.

When a new museum was announced for Glebe Park, opening July 1, 1980, the decision was made to bring Reid House along for the ride. The century home was transported by truck to its current location beside the main exhibit at 66 Museum Rd.

"Any time the house has a quirk or something unexplained, I have to think to myself that it was literally picked up, put on the back of a truck and driven over here," Butler said. "The fact the house has survived all these years is amazing."

Butler said the museum has remained in touch with members of the Reid family and is always looking for family heirlooms. One made its way back to the County eight or nine years ago – a rocking chair Jean Reid sold during one of her many garage sales that had found its way to Alberta.

Asked about her favourite piece in the exhibit, Butler said she likes the corner cabinet in the kitchen because of the memories it draws out of visitors.

"I hear so many stories from people who remember similar units their parents or grandparents had. That's a huge part of what museums do – telling stories from the past that spark connection and conversation," she said.

Reid House was last open for a full season in 2019. It was closed through much of the pandemic and, once restrictions lifted, staff found the building needed multiple fixes, including a new roof. That work was completed last fall, with the space reopening May 18.

Butler said there are some new items on display, including recycled pieces that have been in storage for several years.

"The house looks fuller than it did before. Our goal is to make it look as lived in as possible," Butler said, with two staging areas downstairs and more upstairs. "This summer, we're just delighted to have Reid House open again. We know people have been curious to get back in there. Our focus for the summer is just to welcome everyone back."

A popular site for paranormal investigators, Butler said there are plans for another supernatural event later this year.

"They have had some unexplained things happen inside the house. Apparently, the building has a lot of spirits in it," Butler said. "We are still trying to figure out if the spirits here are connected to the house."

Reid House is open for tours through summer by donation Tuesday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Why Did the Turtle Cross the Road?

Artist to host 'golden owl celebration'

By Lisa Gervais

Biljana Banchotova Webb is having a 50th birthday party this July – and is inviting neighbours, artists, elders, children “and dreamers” to a five-day ceremony of art, story, music “and belonging.”

She’s calling it the ‘golden owl celebration’.

She said the gathering is rooted in the land she owns in Tory Hill and 50 years of “creative becoming.”

Banchotova Webb is founding director of SpiralGate of Art and Well-Being and the Frog Hollow Integrative Art Experience (FHIAE). She was born on July 8, 1976, in South Africa. She said both endeavours are “a living creative sanctuary nestled in the Haliburton Highlands, encompassing Whirling Wisdom Art Studio — a multidisciplinary indoor arts and teaching space — and Frog Hollow Gardens, an outdoor ecosystem rich with ceremony, ecological teaching, and community gathering.”

She added FHIAE is a community, not-for-profit expression of her vision, offering programming rooted in land-based wisdom, ancestral healing, sound ceremony, and the living arts.

Banchotova Webb said she is a certified lead artist educator through the Royal Conservatory of Music and a sound ceremony practitioner with over 26 years of collaborative work alongside First Nations communities.

She added her practice weaves together creational energy, natural law, drum-building, stained glass, and the healing power of story “always in service of the land and the people who walk upon it.”

She noted the main celebration will be on July 11-12.

Banchotova Webb said there would be a welcoming sacred fire ceremony led by an Indigenous African guest; a story bench dedication; an ancestral spiral garden dedication; bead-seed weaving circle; aerial art and performance; and a tea party

“This is more than an event — it is a living story being written in real time, in the soil and sound and ceremony of the Haliburton Highland,” she added.

The venue is at 18378 Hwy. 118 Tory Hill. For registration and information Email: froghollow118@gmail.com

Happy Canada Day Haliburton Highlands

By Lisa Gervais

Canada Day next Wednesday (July 1) offers a variety of events across the Highlands, with most of the action in Minden Hills and Highlands East and a sprinkling in Algonquin Highlands.

The nation's birthday gets underway early in the County. In Minden, families register for the popular fishing derby at 7:30 a.m. They then line the Gull River with rods and pails for the three-hour catch-all. The event is for kids 14 and under, who must wear a life jacket. The last call for weigh-in is 11 a.m. with lots of prizes on offer for the young anglers.

There's always plenty going on downtown. After the derby, Water and Milne streets are filled with vendors until about 2 p.m. with food booths from Minden Rotary, the Minden and District Lions Club, Mulligans and The Lemon Bar. The classic car show will also see vintage rides along Water Street from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The opening ceremony is at 10:15 a.m. followed by a cupcake giveaway at the community services tent while supplies last and the popular rubber duck race, hosted by the Minden Agricultural Society.

There are a number of events at the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, too. People can tour the Museum & Heritage Village, Nature's Place, and the Agnes Jamieson Gallery.

An interesting add-on this year is the Conundrum installation. The Conundrum, created by artist David Hynes, is a unique musical instrument - a combination 13-foot canoe and drum that has gained international attention.

There will be air bounce inflatables; face painting by Pockets and an ice cream giveaway sponsored by Kawartha Dairy, while supplies last.

The arena will see a magic show, featuring Ray the Cool Magician; at 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. while a bouncy castle and other equipment will be available in the gymnasium.

In the evening, Nick and Benton will play in the bandshell from 7:30-9:30 p.m.; there'll be a food booth; and a fireworks show put on by SuperNova.

Class of '76 reflects on simpler time

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

For the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School (HHSS) class of 1976, school spirit wasn't just about bell-bottoms, sports cars and classic rock; it was a time defined by friendship that bridged town borders, home-cooked cafeteria meals, and a much simpler time that feels worlds away.

More than 40 HHSS alumni gathered over the weekend for a 50-year reunion, with former classmates travelling from across North America. The multi-day event saw former students converging on the County from as far as California, Alberta, and New Brunswick.

Organizers and classmates Barb (Payne) Fawcett, Sandy (Gough) Kriss, Cleve Roberts, and Kim Emmerson sat down with The Highlander ahead of the weekend reunion to discuss what life was like as a student back in the day. Looking back to 1976, the group recalled a vibe that would shock modern students.

"We were saying how it's kind of simpler times back then," Roberts said. "We were talking about going to school and having a rifle in your pickup truck because you might get a partridge on the way home. If you didn't want to leave it in the pickup truck, you'd put it in your locker. Can you imagine these days?"

In the fall, it was perfectly normal for students to take a week off just to go hunting.

"That was just a normal thing in Haliburton," Fawcett explained. "There'd be a whole bunch of people that wouldn't be in class for, you know, maybe up to a week or longer if they were away hunting."

"It was a simpler time, but we didn't know that," Kriss added.

It was also a time in which technology was on the verge of taking off. The friends recalled learning how to use a slide rule in Grade 11 physics just as the first handheld calculators were hitting the market.

"I can remember George Cooper bought one of the first ones. It was $75," Roberts said. "That would be equivalent to like $500 today."

Communication was also different back then. Without cellphones or private phone lines for some, students relied on local "party lines," which shared phone access with neighbours on the lake and which made calling friends for help with homework a feat in itself.

The Minden-Haliburton rivalry was alive and well back then and on full display at the rink on Friday nights.

"You didn't need to go any further than the rink to see that," Roberts said.

But according to the group, the class of '76 managed to completely dissolve the border between the two towns.

"When this group came together, all of that kind of disappeared," Roberts noted. "It really didn't matter where you were from. It was who you were."

For Fawcett and Kriss, who came in from Minden for school, they entered Grade 9 with a mix of anxiety and excitement alongside Haliburton locals Emmerson and Roberts. And by the end of the first year, the group had blended easily, so much so that teachers used the class as a gold standard of comparison for more than a decade.

"For probably 10 or more years, at least, when there were still teachers at the high school, our class was what they would talk about," Fawcett said. "Our class was kind of the, I don't mean epitome in a bad way, but that was kind of the comparison."

Part of the reunion festivities included a banquet dinner at Minden's iconic Dominion Hotel, a venue that raised a few eyebrows apparently.

"The Dominion back in the day, when we were around, was seedy," Kriss, who selected the venue, said with a laugh.

The Rockcliffe was the preferred choice for teens in the '70s. Today, however, the Dominion has been renovated, and its current owners have warmly welcomed the class, the group said.

"It triggers people's memories from 50 years ago," Fawcett joked, adding she was told by her parents to walk on the opposite side of the street from the Dominion.

When asked what advice they would give their teenage selves on graduation day, the group collectively said self-compassion.

"I didn't think that I was smart enough to go to college," Kriss shared candidly. "I was smart enough to go. I just didn't know it. So, I think for young people, they need to not be too hard on themselves. Just keep putting one foot in front of the other."

And once the reunion wraps up and the former classmates go their separate ways, organizers hope they take with them a sense of gratitude for the times they had.

"I hope they take with them that we are so blessed that we lived in these times," Kriss said. "The relationships, the friendships, the fun, the simplicity, the music... that we've lived in this period of time is such a blessing."
