Water levels subsiding in Minden Hills

By Lisa Gervais

The Township of Minden Hills said flooding is beginning to stabilize in the municipality – with the evacuation centre transitioning to a warming centre as of April 21.

It's upstairs at the community centre at 55 Parkside St. with 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. hours for now, with shower facilities, refreshments, and spots for charging devices.

The recreation centre resumed scheduling April 22 with the fitness room, walking track, rink and drop-in programs all a go, while registered programming resumes April 27. The cultural centre also reopened April 22.

The township said this past Tuesday “water levels in the Minden watershed continue to fluctuate. The township will work with the Ministry of Natural Resources and Parks Canada in monitoring water levels and conditions over the next two weeks.”

The Sunnybrook bridge downtown and Loggers footbridge by Canadian Tire are still closed.

Minister of emergency preparedness and response, Jill Dunlop, visited the Minden fire hall and evacuation centre April 20.

The township said while conditions are stabilizing, they are still in a holding pattern and planning for the recovery is underway.

Dunlop said the province stepped in late last week when they were contacted through the community emergency management co-ordinator - responding with Global Medic volunteers -who had been sandbagging at the fire hall - and Ontario Corps volunteers through the Salvation Army Corps, who have been coordinating efforts at the evacuation centre this week.

Dunlop last visited the community when it declared a state of emergency following the 2025 ice storm.

She commented Monday on “how the community has really come together.

“Everyone is working together ... the province and the municipality and our Ontario Corps volunteers and partners out here.” She mentioned mental health supports are also being provided.

When asked about provincial funding once floodwaters recede and the damage to infrastructure can be assessed.

State of emergency to last several more days

Dunlop said she spoke to the minister of municipal affairs and housing April 20 advising she was visiting Minden Hills. "It will be something that I will be speaking to him about and assessing the situation." She noted 10 communities had declared states of emergency.

The township declared its on April 15. Minden Hills mayor Bob Carter expected it to continue for another five to eight days from this past Monday.

He said they've probably had as much water as previous floods, in 2019 and 2013, but it's been managed better, mitigating risk as much as possible.

Carter said they have to wait for the water to go down to assess damage, although they were planning to do bridge inspections later this week. "That's the real thing. What's been deposited on these lands, wells may have been affected."

As a result of the Sunnybrook bridge closure, Trillium Lakelands District School Board has been bussing students – who would normally walk across the bridge – to and from the IGA parking lot on Bobcaygeon Road.

Volunteers

During National Volunteer Week, The Highlander caught up with helpers in Minden.

Francis D'Antimo began volunteering last Thursday when a beaver dam broke, sending water across County Road 121.

"There was a whole bunch of us going up 121 to save these people's homes," he said.

He was on Anson Street last Wednesday night in waist-high cold water helping to sandbag. He helped lay bags on Water Street. He said one of the hardest things was talking to seniors who had no insurance.

Elizabeth Mathew swapped her night job checking in people at the rec centre for shifts in the kitchen at the evacuation centre.

The Hal High student served food made by the Minden Community Food Centre.

She said it had been fun, hanging out with Minden Hills full-time staffers she never sees, "and it's also nice just to be able to serve people and have conversations."

She said she was personally unaffected by the flooding but "I really feel for anybody who is being affected in that way. I also feel really positive for how much, as a community, we have rallied together."

Highlands East

Highlands East said this week that Contau Lake Road remains closed at Irondale Road due to flooding. Access is available from Gooderham (County Road 507) only. The Community Centre Road and Gooderham Park have been reopened. Updates will be shared as conditions change.

Sandbags are available at the public works yard at 19897 Hwy. 118. This is a self-serve station. Residents are asked to bring their own shovel and lend a hand to neighbours where possible.

Council grounds airport consultant

By Mike Baker

Algonquin Highlands council has grounded plans to spend up to $122,000 on a consultant for a revised development plan for Stanhope Municipal Airport, opting to complete some of the work gradually in-house instead.

The township committed to the six-figure sum during budget deliberations to help advance several projects at the facility, with council also seeking advice on what to do with 10 developable lots, currently vacant but ripe for commercial or industrial use.

An initial plan was completed in 2014, but council put out an RFP to update the document in 2024. After receiving little interest, public works manager, Adam Thorn, pitched the job to Kitchener-based Avia NG Airport Consultants, which was hired last year to assist with tree clearing at the airport.

Jordan McDonald, a project manager with the firm, presented a proposal to council April 16. His seven-step plan included an in-person visit of the airport to assess existing infrastructure; consult with municipal staff and airport users; review the existing document; and put together detailed drawings outlining potential upgrades.

“We work specifically with smaller municipal and regional airports... specializing in operational service, runways, airspace and planning, development and design and terminal works,” McDonald said.

Janine Mitchell, another firm representative, said Avia NG recently partnered with the Town of Midland on a new plan for Huronia Airport.

“Very similar exercise to what you guys are looking for. We reviewed their property, figured out what land could be developed, what could be sold off,” Mitchell said.

Mayor Liz Danielsen felt the township already knew much of that information – asking Thorn if staff could handle tweaking the previous plan without any additional spending. The public works manager said he could, while also advocating for greater involvement from the airport committee.

Thorn said the first thing council has to decide on is what to do with the vacant lots.

“Does the township want to be landlords, or just sell the property?” he asked, suggesting council hire a commercial real estate agent to gauge interest.

Attracting new commerce and industry to the airport lands is key to balancing its books, Thorn said. The facility operates at a loss, though expenses were scaled back in 2026 – anticipated at $57,900 from over $107,000 last year.

“I think we have a lot of opportunities within the airport property, as well as the developable area, to sell lots to help offset costs to develop other lots for businesses,” Thorn said. “If we can sell-off, say, six lots and that covers us developing two lots [to manage ourselves], that would be very beneficial and efficient for us as a municipality and for our taxpayers.”

Several of the airport’s hangars are damaged, meaning they’re closed and not bringing in any revenue, Thorn said. The township has been told it will need to invest around $2.3 million to fix the roofs of five buildings.

Land is still set aside, too, for a longer runway – which could, one day, open the door for larger planes to utilize the airport. Last year, council also approved a spend of up to $100,000 to help bring a new food vendor to the site.

As of Dec. 31, the township had just under $1.05 million in its airport reserves.

Danielsen liked the idea of breaking the airport plan into “bitesize pieces” and doing the work in-house. The $125,000 set aside for that would be added to the reserve fund.

Deputy mayor Jennifer Dailoux worried that completing things step-by-step could prove more costly, but coun. Sabrina Richards felt it was more prudent.

“This is about trying to save costs and move the needle forward at the airport without spending money unless we have a firm return on it... we don’t want to build something unless we have somebody willing to move in and know it will be rented out,” Richards said.

Thorn said he would return to council’s next meeting May 7 with a breakdown of the property and its existing assets.

“I’m looking more basic – it doesn’t need to be an elaborate plan right now. We need to determine what council wants. Once we establish what properties we have and what we want to do, then we can move onto the next step... of developing it or leaving it and selling as-is,” Thorn said.

Haliburton woman fined for illegal hunting

By Lisa Gervais

The Ministry on Natural Resources said last week that Katy-Lynn Meloche of Haliburton pleaded guilty to trespassing for the purpose of hunting, unlawfully possessing a firearm at night, using a firearm carelessly to hunt, and possessing illegally killed wildlife.

She was fined $5,000 and is prohibited from possessing an Ontario hunting licence and engaging in any hunting activities in the province for four years. She must also successfully retake the Ontario Hunter Education Course before applying for a hunting licence.

The Ontario Court of Justice heard that on Nov. 13, 2024, conservation officers responded to a public complaint of trespassing for the purpose of hunting a deer at night after a blood trail and a crossbow bolt were discovered in the complainant's backyard within the Village of Haliburton.

They said an investigation determined Meloche shot at an antlered deer twice with a crossbow on Nov. 12, 2024. The deer was wounded after the initial shot and Meloche tracked the deer to a neighbouring property, taking a second shot at the deer after legal hunting hours. The bolt from the second shot was recovered stuck in the ground within close proximity to a home. It was found Meloche discharged the crossbow without reasonable consideration for people or property.

13 and unlawfully possessed by Meloche. Permission to recover the deer was not granted from all property owners where Meloche had tracked the deer.

Health unit looks for direction

By Lisa Gervais

Heather May attended Lakelands Public Health’s town hall in Minden April 14 out of concern for seniors.

“I’ve worked with seniors as a professional and we have a community that is becoming more and more senior and we need to adapt to them, instead of adapting to how we are going to make more money, or take care of the budget, or whatever,” May said.

“We need to look at the fact people who are paying taxes in this community are seniors and they need things, and some of the things they need they are not going to be able to get and someone has to push for them.”

After initial remarks by medical officer of health, Dr. Thomas Piggott, and Highlands East deputy mayor and County coun. Cec Ryall – who is vice chair of the public health board - attendees could go to various stations highlighting different health unit services.

May had questions, saying, “I wanted to know how we can fill in some of the gaps for seniors. Some of the gaps are so obvious.” She does not think the health unit is addressing the topic of senior care to its full capacity.

May was just one member of the general public who came out for the town hall hosted by the just over a year-old Lakelands Public Health, which has come about from a merger of the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit and Peterborough Public Health.

Ryall said they were beginning to develop the health unit’s strategic plan. “We came here to listen, to learn, and to ensure that the future of public health reflects the needs, priorities and aspirations of the people in the communities we serve.”

Piggott said he wanted folks to think about the health of residents of Haliburton County for years to come. “Because we really have an opportunity, as we’re thinking about the strategic plan, to think about the future of health in this region, beyond just months and years, to generations ahead.”

He added the health unit is asking itself “who are we; where do we come from; why are we here, and where are we going?”

Piggott discussed the programs the health unit offers, ranging from infants to seniors, such as public health inspections at restaurants, managing health outbreaks, immunization, school-based early childhood development, substance use and injury prevention, chronic disease prevention, and emergency management.

He noted $100 on average per capita of people’s taxes goes to public health. With inflation, he said funding to health units is down over the past decade. He noted there is more spending in Ontario on treating disease, than prevention. Piggott believes an ounce of prevention is indeed a pound of cure. He talked about the aging demographic in the region, saying a larger portion of the population will be sicker; and people living in poverty experience more health issues. Residents were also encouraged to complete a survey that can be found at <https://www.lakelandsph.ca>

Oil spill leads to drinking water advisory

By Lisa Gervais

Lakelands Public Health is advising residents and cottage owners on South Lake in Minden Hills not to use lake water for any household purposes following a fuel oil spill.

They said furnace oil was released from a private property over the weekend.

“The Ministry of the Environment, Conservation and Parks (MECP) have responded and are working with the property owner to contain the spill. MECP has confirmed that a sheen of fuel is present on the lake’s surface. Due to changing wind conditions, the location of the sheen is shifting and cannot be fully contained.”

Many properties on South Lake draw water directly from the lake.

As a precaution, Lakelands Public Health is issuing a drinking water advisory for affected residents.

Residents and cottage owners drawing water from South Lake are advised not to use the water for: drinking, cooking or food preparation, brushing teeth, washing fruits and vegetables, bathing or showering as well as dishwashing.

Other tips include using bottled water or an alternative safe drinking water source not affected by the advisory.

Minden Hills fire chief Don Kruger said the township has 15 cases of bottled water that will be donated to residents of South Lake. They will be available for pick-up at the fire hall as of yesterday afternoon. They will be on a first come first serve basis, or if a member of the lake owners’ committee wish to come pick them up to disperse them.

MECP, Minden Hills, and Lakelands Public Health are actively monitoring the situation. Local agencies, including the OPP, have also received inquiries from concerned residents. The advisory will remain in effect until further notice. Residents will be informed when it is safe to resume normal water use. Stay Informed For updates and additional information, visit: LakelandsPH.ca/BWA or contact Lakelands Public Health at 1-844-575-4567.

Take a breath

Since Minden Hills declared a state of emergency due to flooding April 14, I have been a daily visitor to town.

It all began last Tuesday as the water rose over familiar roads, such as Anson and Orde streets, McKnight and St. Germain.

Although it had been since 2019 that I last waded through those streets in rubber boots, it felt all too familiar.

Heading to the sandbagging operation outside of the Minden Curling Club felt like déjà vu, too.

However, some things have certainly changed.

I'm told the same volume of water is likely coming through the watershed as did in 2019 and 2013. However, that deluge has been better managed by Parks Canada. While everyone likes to blame Parks Canada for its management of the Trent-Severn Waterway system, the fact is their reaction to the perfect storm – snowmelt with a large concentration of water and heavy rainfall – saved Minden village and many of its residents and businesses from what could have been catastrophe.

That is not to say some folks out there are not in dire straits. Many are facing large cleanups and the costs associated with that.

Another big difference this time around is the response to the flood. Certainly, the township pivoted very quickly in declaring a state of emergency. Sadly, we have all learned much from the 2025 ice storm. This time around, the township had a template: declaration, call for provincial help, dust off the management plan from just over a year ago. Neighbouring municipalities certainly chipped in, as did agencies, community volunteers and businesses.

The province is learning too – effectively organizing a volunteer brigade to respond to emergencies.

Emergency Management Ontario has been instrumental throughout this situation. The new Ontario Corps initiative brought an amazing number of volunteers to help in the community with sandbagging activities via Global Medic. At the evacuation centre at the Minden Hills community centre, the Salvation Army has provided supplies and volunteers to staff the centre. This has been critical as the township continues to address issues and prepare for recovery. Last time around, township staff were seconded to do a lot of this work.

The community always responds in these situations in our County. When I was sandbagging Sunday at Our Lady of Fatima Church, the spirit of volunteerism was humbling. As always.

It appears the tide is turning. Water levels are receding. It's soon time to begin recovery. The township will be assessing the Sunnybrook bridge for damage as well as other municipal infrastructure. Homeowners will begin to get their houses back in order. Life will go back to normal.

There will also be time to debrief. What did we get right? What did we get wrong? It's these types of conversations – rather than criticism – that will lead to an even better response next time we are in a similar situation.

It's not over yet, mind you. It could still be another few days until the bridge is open and kids start walking to school rather than being bussed from the IGA parking lot. However, for now, it's okay for everyone to take a collective deep breath.

Keeping it in-house

It was encouraging to see Algonquin Highlands council last week buck the trend of municipalities spending big money on outside consultants.

On April 16, the township heard from Jordan McDonald, a project manager with Avia NG Airport Consultants out of Kitchener. He pitched a $122,000 project that would have seen his firm complete a seven-step plan analyzing Stanhope Municipal Airport.

The proposal included an in-person visit to assess existing infrastructure, consult with municipal staff and airport users and review a previous development plan completed in 2014. McDonald said Avia NG would put together detailed drawings outlining ways to improve current assets and pave the way for new ones.

Council set aside $125,000 during 2026 budget deliberations for the work, but, upon closer review, mayor Liz Danielsen felt the township would be better off saving its money and having work completed in-house. She rightly criticized some components of Avia NG's costing – including $10,000-20,000 for an in-person presentation of the draft report.

It was a breath of fresh air seeing council fly in the face of public sector tradition. Governments, including the ones in our County, are usually far too quick to spend taxpayers' money on fancy reports and documents that are sometimes used, but quickly forgotten about. It's especially frustrating when the final product is often on par, or even inferior, to previous works compiled by in-house staff.

Public works manager Adam Thorn has no doubt kept very busy with his normal day-to-day tasks, but he knows that airport facility like the back of his hand. For what's needed right now – namely, council to decide whether it wants to keep several developable lots at the site or sell them – he's the right man for the job.

There will need to be some outside help. Like for thinking about ways to attract new businesses to the airport – but that can be done by working with a commercial realtor, who could bring potential partners to the table.

The airport has been a financial headache for the township for some time. It has operated at a deficit for several years, though costs have been scaled back some 43.45 per cent in 2026 ($57,900 budgeted versus a $107,592 spend last year). Another $160,000 has been earmarked for airport development, though the bulk of that will now go back into a reserve fund that boasts more than $1 million.

Council has done a good job planning for a rainy day at the Stanhope site. Since 2020, the municipality has contributed $974,149 to the airport reserve. Costs quickly pile up, though. In 2020, council toyed with the idea of spending $100,000 developing an access road to service the developable lots. Around $2.3 million is earmarked for hangar repairs.

One thing council needs to figure out is how much return on investment the public really gets from the airport. The existing runway, pitched in the early 2000s, has sat on the shelf for years and would surely cost millions of dollars to complete.

2,500 ft. runway isn't large enough to allow for commercial flights, so revenue options are limited. Plans for a new 4,000 ft.

Back in 2020, deputy mayor Jennifer Dailloux advocated for selling the airport, or ceding it to the Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry, which opened a fire base at the site in 2016.

There are benefits to having a local airport – it helps with tourism, though it's unclear how many people are flying up to Algonquin Highlands for day trips considering the rurality of the location. It's also used by emergency services.

The airport's long-term viability, at least in some ways, is tied to those vacant lots. I liked Thorn's idea of selling some of them to raise money to pay for needed repairs and development of future infrastructure. That way the burden doesn't fall completely on the taxbase.

This development plan will be something of a moving target for the township, with more discussion planned May 7.

Council needs to decide what it wants the Stanhope airport to be. And how to balance the budget to ensure it doesn't remain such a drain on municipal resources.

Clean and in good repair only

Dear editor,

The 4Cs wants to thank the community and business partners for all the support that has been received to keep the Haliburton food bank going during these tough times. Our number of clients has almost doubled since this time last year.

Many people in our community don't know that the 4Cs is both the Lily Ann Thrift Store and the Haliburton food bank (both on York Street). Items donated to the Lily Ann are sold and those proceeds, along with cash donations, are used to purchase food for the Haliburton food bank. Every dollar of every cash donation goes directly to the purchase of food.

The 4Cs has a problem that the community can help with. You might not believe it, but the 4Cs receives so much soiled and damaged clothing that we have had to find a way to create income instead of wasting dollars on landfill costs. That service is no longer available to us. Diabetes Canada, which has paid for these unsellable items in the past, is not picking up from the 4Cs at this time. Over a year, this will be a loss in income to the 4Cs of more than $6,000 this year alone.

That means if donations to the store include soiled or damaged clothing, those items now have to be taken by the 4Cs, at a cost, to the local landfill site. We are asking your readers to help us solve this problem by continuing to donate to the Lily, but to ensure that all items are clean and in good repair. If not, please take your own unusable clothing to the landfill.

Thank you for helping the 4Cs stock the food shelves instead of incurring landfill costs. Help us continue to help those friends and neighbours in our community dealing with food insecurity to be able to access food when needed.

Louise Ewing, chair, 4Cs haven't got a bus or train available that can take us to surrounding towns and villages or to the city.

Conveniently, Muskoka, where Ford owns a cottage, has both. Ford is spending billions of taxpayers' dollars on transit for Toronto, spas, a new science centre, convention centre, Billy Bishop Airport amongst other things.

We don't have the luxury of a bus to travel to Toronto? Presently, we in Minden are suffering through floods. Our aging sewage plant cannot handle the added stress. The added raw sewage was released into the Gull River and allowed to flow into our lakes and the Trent-Severn Waterway system.

Many of us get our household water from our surrounding lakes. Voters in rural Ontario are being ignored. Our tax dollars are being used for useless city luxuries while we use household contaminated water. The only time politicians consider rural Ontario is during election time when you need our votes.

Editor's note: Premier Doug Ford subsequently sold the jet. The wastewater bypass was for a short period of time and not considered dangerous.

Support Minden auxiliary

Dear editor,

Just wanted to remind everyone of the gift shop outside the Minden long-term care home.

Our Spring merchandise has arrived and the selection is fantastic. Because of the overflow from previous stock, we will be having blow-out sales Fridays May 8 and 15, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Please stop by for some outstanding bargains.

Watch for us at many locations July 10 for our annual tag day, a huge fundraiser for us.

Our 'wine on wheels' tickets will be available shortly and we have moved up the draw date to September so make sure you get your tickets early.

We plan on having a presence at the Minden farmers market a few Saturdays this summer so please stop by if you see us.

Your support means so much to us as the more we raise, the more we can support the health care in our community.

We thank you for your past and continuing support

2026 Municipal Election

Thinking of Running for Council... Now What?

Free - Candidate Information Workshop

Tuesday, May 5, 2026 - 6:30 PM

Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129
719 Mountain St. Haliburton

Who Should Attend:

- Potential candidates
- Spouse or partner (family members of potential candidates)
- Anyone interested in learning more about local government

Anyone who is considering running for the role of Mayor, Deputy Mayor or Ward Councillor in any of the County of Haliburton municipalities is invited to attend a free candidate information session.

The information session “Thinking of Running for Council...Now What?” will be led by Clerks on Call, municipal management consultants with over 30 years of municipal experience. The session will provide an overview of the understanding the reasons to run—or not run—for council, key considerations before entering the race, the roles and responsibilities of council members and staff, the powers and influence of municipal government, the importance of transparency and accountability, and strategies for engaging with the media and the public.

There is no registration required for in person attendance.

Nominations to run for Council commence on May 1, 2026. Nomination Day is Friday, August 21, 2026 (9:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.). Municipal Election Day will be held October 26, 2026.

Hosted by Township of Algonquin Highlands, Municipalities of Highlands East and Dysart et al and the Township of Minden Hills

Double double take: Tim's gets new look

By Lisa Gervais

Tim Hortons in Minden has had a facelift, just in time for the busy summer season.

Owners Mike Garland and Paige Chapman said they got a letter from corporate in 2025, notifying them that it was time for the Minden site's 10-year renovation.

They began working on the planning late last year with head office, which has pre-approved project management companies and design teams.

They wanted to get the work done in winter when the sit-in and drive-thru restaurant is not as busy. They brought in a temporary trailer to service customers while work was underway in the coffee shop.

The job recently finished, with customers noting some big changes.

While not necessarily visible to the clientele, Garland said one key component was moving the electrical room, which was in the middle of the staff work area by the drive-thru window. “Everything, the sandwich bar and coffee area, was crammed into one little spot. Sometimes you need more staff, but just couldn't fit any more into that area. It was important to move that to allow for any efficiencies.”

Chapman added, “the renovation focuses on creating a more comfortable and efficient workspace for our team members, while also giving our guests a fresh, modern, and inviting new look.” There is the same amount of seating.

Some of the features include self-serve kiosks for the first time, as well as four tills, up from two. The owners think this will help during busy times. They also have music for the first time. The bathrooms have been renovated with floor-to-ceiling tiles; there is new LED lighting; and the façade got a paint job. The artwork features cottage life scenes and hockey, two things Chapman and Garland know people like in this area.

They added while the previous layout was a challenge for staff, they still achieved platinum status for 2025. That puts them in the top three per cent of Tim Hortons across Canada for speed of service, guest feedback, and other key performance indicators.

Staffing woes

Garland and Chapman said they hope the new design will be more attractive to potential hires.

“Like many local business owners, we know staffing is a major challenge. In the past year, we've had only two students apply, attend an interview, and show up for their first shift,” Garland said.

Chapman added it is far from their experience in New Brunswick, where a lot of high school students worked. They said one barrier might be the lack of public transportation, with students needing their own car, or relying on family and friends to drive them to work.

Smile cookies

Their annual Smile Cookie campaign is running from April 27- May 3. One-hundred per cent of cookie proceeds from Minden and Haliburton Tim Hortons will be donated to Brooksong Retreat and Cancer Support Centre.

Executive director Barb Smith-Morrison said, “it's going to be a fun week of connecting with the local community while raising funds and awareness for local cancer support.”

Highlander people

Author strives to get people out in nature

By Lisa Gervais

Rick Whitteker got the call April 16 that 500 copies of his self-published book, Nature Nuggets, had arrived from a Markham printer to Parker Pad and Printing.

“It’s very exciting,” the newspaper columnist told The Highlander in an interview.

He said he had never envisaged writing a book, so the fact it has come together “is almost hard to comprehend. I’m super happy.”

Nature Nuggets is a compilation of 30 articles Whitteker has submitted to County Life over the past two years via his bi-weekly column Naturally Yours. He said the book idea came from feedback on those columns.

“People would go out of their way to talk to me, in a restaurant or on the street, not people I would normally socialize with. They would tell me they really enjoyed my last article. And I started to think, ‘maybe, there’s something here’. I dipped my toe into the idea of whether a compilation would work.” He talked to some folks and thought he could self-publish if he kept the project modest.

Nature Nuggets includes 20 articles on day hiking and paddling destinations and 10 articles on a range of ecological topics connected to the environs of Haliburton County.

A made-in-Haliburton product, Whitteker said all contributions to the book, including the writing, editing, publishing, and almost all the photos, were sourced locally. “I just felt there were enough resources within the community to get this done. It’s all about the Haliburton Highlands, so it made sense to try to keep everything in that envelope. It’s kind of unique that way.”

Whitteker said that to write columns, he needs to have “some real contact with my content beforehand. The articles I enjoy the most are the ones that I go out and experience something that’s really impressive; whether it be going for a hike and experiencing wildlife, or just something that’s impressive environmentally.”

He said this time of year, it can be harder to find topics, especially under current flood conditions. Last week, however, he started writing a column about the mental health benefits of bird song. “It’s something I felt when I went outside.”

Whitteker moved to the Highlands in 1997. He was the editor of a wolf magazine when he worked at Haliburton Forest. He has worked in outdoor adventure, including at Fleming College for 15 years. He still works part-time at the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust. It was through that work that he decided to write again with Darren Lum giving him the opportunity with County Life.

At the Land Trust, they talk about climate change resiliency and biodiversity, themes represented in his writing; about having a long-term vision for the land and water.

“As an older adult, this gives me purpose and joy, and is the main reason why I’m doing it. And the whole idea of getting people out into nature is important to me, too. You can’t protect what you don’t love, or you can’t take care of something you don’t know. The more people are outdoors, the more likely they are to say ‘I believe in conservation, or I believe we need to take care of what’s around us better,’ because we can see the results of not doing that.”

He’s already sold 100 books sight unseen. There will be a book launch May 8, 10 a.m. to noon at Castle Antiques in Haliburton. The book is, or will soon be, available at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery, UpRiver in Minden and Haliburton, and Masters Bookstore in Haliburton.

“It’s a project. You take it on and you see it through to fruition. You have some self doubts along the way. And then it ends up coming in 50 boxes and you reflect on that and you feel pretty good about it.” Whitteker said.

Anne (née Kurkowsky) Cohoon

HAPPY 100TH BIRTHDAY

April 25, 2026

Anne celebrates her 100th birthday with her children, Jesse and Nancy, and grandchildren, Christopher, Jodi, Andrea and Natasha, and Eric and Tracey. Her great-grandchildren, Leia and Cade always delight.

Her family includes Al and Arlene Letwinka, Elaine Wright and many nieces, nephews and coat-tail relatives. She is honorary mum and gran to many and is loved and cared for by special friends, young and old, from near and far, who have been touched by her caring soul.

On this special day, Anne remembers her husband, Ken, and daughter, Cheryl, and other family members and dear friends who have passed and wait to greet her, eventually.

Born near Stenen, Anne has travelled from coast to coast and around the world. She is supported in her latest journey by the staff and caregivers of Highland Wood. Sharing hugs, kisses and back rubs along the way.

To commemorate Anne’s birthday, a donation to the Highland Wood Residents’ Council is welcome. hhhs.ca/foundation

‘No one rides alone or gets left behind’

By Adam Frisk

Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Haliburton Real Easy Ryders Cycling Club is preparing for the 2026 riding season while maintaining a philosophy that has guided the club since its inception in 1997.

The club is about the company, not the kilometres per hour.

While the Haliburton Highlands may be known for the grueling climbs of the Canadian Shield, the Real Easy Ryders (yes, it’s spelled with a ‘y’) emphasizes that cycling is for everyone.

“Pace wasn’t important. And it was just a way for some friends to get together,” board president LeeAnn Cruz told The Highlander. “Getting out to have a ride together and enjoy the scenery and, you know, go out for a coffee or lunch after the ride. And so it was considered just an easy ride.”

While the club name may suggest a slow pace, it actually reflects a social-first attitude where “no one rides alone and no one gets left behind,” Cruz explained. The club has also embraced modern technology and the popularity of e-bikes. About 45 per cent of the club’s current membership uses electric-assisted bicycles to help navigate the rolling hills of the Highlands.

“What goes up must come down,” Cruz said. “E-bikes go a long way toward helping our riders continue to enjoy the sport, even in hilly areas like Haliburton County.”

The Real Easy Ryders also follow strict safety protocol to ensure that there’s a respectful relationship with motorists while sharing the roadway. Cruz explained that cyclists depart in groups of no more than six to allow cars to pass safely. They ride in a single-file line unless on quiet backroads, reverting to single file as soon as a “car back” is signaled. The club also maintains open dialogue with the local council to advocate for improved cycling infrastructure throughout the County.

As for the social aspect, the post-ride is just as important as the exercise itself. The club has three group rides throughout the week and three potluck lunches throughout the season.

“And the rides that include a potluck lunch are always the most well-attended rides of the season,” Cruz said with a laugh. “Our numbers seem to shoot up dramatically.”

The group often makes a pit-stop for lunch or a coffee at local favourites like Kate’s Burger Counter or The Minden River Cone.

The club has riders in their late 30s to their mid-80s, who prioritize camaraderie over “hardcore” racing, Cruz said.

The club is kicking off the season with its ‘Let’s Get Rolling’ event on Sunday (April 26) at the Stanhope Firefighters Hall, starting at 1 p.m. The free event will feature presentations on group safety, a look at the 2026 ride schedule, including trips to Goderich and Napanee. Dave Paddock, of Algonquin Outfitters, will also provide a demo on how to change a flat. For more information, visit haliburtonrealeasyryders.com.

Volunteer sandbaggers show Minden the love

By Lisa Gervais

When Minden Hills flooded in 2013 and 2019, Tiffany English volunteered to help fill and deliver sandbags. So, when the Gull River, along with the Burnt and Irondale rivers began to rise this spring, she headed down to the sand piles outside the Minden Curling Club once again.

“We’re on high ground, so just here to help,” she told The Highlander. A tiler by trade, she was taking time off to pitch in for the community. Her fiancé was out with the truck delivering sandbags, making runs to Carnarvon, Minden and Kinmount. She said some elderly folks had come to get sandbags to load into SUVs and volunteers just wanted to give them some extra help.

Asked about the spirit of volunteerism in Haliburton County, English said, “It always does amaze me, but I am honestly never shocked because we always come together whether it’s a state of emergency or a tragic incident.”

She referenced how the community answered a GoFundMe call to action for the family of Curtis Barker, who is battling a rare cancer – raising more than $100,000 in a short period of time.

English was working beside Faye Mortell, who’d come on her own to help. She said she was helping a resident who asked her what organization she was with. She answered, “myself, no organization. I was at my office watching the river and not being productive.”

Highland Hills United Church minister, Max Ward swapped his cassock for army attire, answering a shoutout for cadets to help out. He brought his mother, Sue Ward.

“Just doing some volunteering for the community,” Ward said. His mom added, “I’ve always done this type of thing.”

Nathalie Chartrand took her boys, Kyle and Ethan Chartrand, out of school for the volunteer gig. Kyle said he was there “because I can help people that are struggling with the flooding.”

Nathalie added, “we’re very fortunate. We don’t have water at our house so, really, this is the least we can come and do I think.”

Faye Martell and Tiffany English met while volunteering. Photos by Lisa Gervais.

ADVERTORIAL

Why patience comes in shades of brown

When the white snow melts, we're left with brown.

That at least is what is happening at Lucas House, my garden next to the post office in Haliburton.

The Little Bluestem, so radiant in the low evening sun of fall, was flattened and matted. The asters, which were tall last year, survived the blanket of snow.

Dormant, yes. Architectural, very much.

Beneath the brown, Prairie Smoke foliage is green. And by the cedars are Snowdrops.

What's already happening

Someone on my road collects sap for syrup. A few weeks ago, his buckets were filling fast. I could see the line through the white plastic get higher every day. The maples were doing their invisible work ready for spring.

Different plants work to different clocks. Cool-season grasses (like our lawns) and sedges get going more quickly. Warm-season grasses, such as my Little Bluestem, won't move until the soil warms more.

Small buds are on the branches of my two Serviceberry trees, responding to the length of the day and the temperature of the air.

Below ground, as the soil warms, roots are growing. Plants are doing important work where we can't see it.

Woodland species are some of the quickest to get started. They leaf out and photosynthesize before the canopy blocks the light. This is why this time of year rewards a slow walk through our forests, from tiny Spring Beauty to white and red Trillium.

These early plants are subtle, which is why the dominant colour of most gardens as spring begins is brown – last year's fashion from this year's slow movers.

And it's why I cheated with my non-native (but not damaging) Snowdrops.

My role

I removed the flattened grasses last week, leaving a few that still have good structure. I also left the asters standing – there might be bees still sleeping in their stems.

Composting the dead and rotting material in a cage behind the house makes the landscape look more tidy and allows light to reach the Prairie Smoke and other plants that are beginning to get going.

This year I've ordered more woodland species for the shaded part of the garden. They'll provide food and habitat for insects in this brownest of months. And I'll shamelessly plant more Snowdrop bulbs next fall.

But I'm also practising patience.

The waiting game

Patience isn't just for the weeks of spring, it's for the years of the garden.

Different plants work to different clocks. Cool-season grasses get going quickly. Warm-season grasses won't move until the soil warms more.

When Lucas House was just planted it looked sparse, threadbare. The plants were small and spaced out. Most of what you saw was soil and mulch. The plants' work was happening underground and out of sight. Their roots were exploring the soil.

And that patience will continue in the years ahead. I'm still waiting for my Butterfly Milkweed to get going, it's such a slow mover. And the sedges I planted last year – I need to wait to see if they'll fill in.

The Slender Mountain Mint was thin in the first year, then vigorous in the second, home and food to scores of insects.

As you walk towards the main entrance of Lucas House, look carefully on the right-hand side and you might notice Wild Strawberry, its green leaves, low to the ground and already growing.

It's not the first thing that catches your eye amid the brown.

But the plant is alive and in a few weeks it will have tiny white flowers and the sweetest of fruit.

SPRING CAR CARE

Getting the granite out for spring

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

It's the time of the year again when vehicle owners are looking to swap their winter tires and hit the open road. However, a simple tire change shouldn't be the only spring maintenance you do on your car or truck.

According to Eddie Pinelli, owner of County Auto, Haliburton's unique environment can be "terrible" on vehicles that require more than a quick rinse at the car wash.

"Our environment is terrible on cars. Believe it or not, there is granite in the dirt," he explained to The Highlander. "There is granite dust, which is very hard, and it causes havoc with brakes and them sticking."

The industry expert explained that the combination of salt, road sand, and gravel acts like a "sandblaster" on the bottom of vehicles, stripping away undercoatings. That's why it's a good idea to get underneath the car with a hose or a professional detailer to clear out the creases where salt and grit hide.

"It's also a good idea to get the car undercoated if you're going to keep it long term," Pinelli said. "It's a proven method. You know, a little bit of oil spray."

When's a good time to swap out the winter rubber? Typically, the industry standard is a consistent air temperature of 7 C. But Pinelli said that Haliburton drivers shouldn't really stress over that seven-degree rule.

"The ground gets cold overnight," he explained. "If it's zero degrees at night and 10 degrees during the day, your tires aren't going to go bald. Don't wait for the rush."

Pinelli said that while winter tires are made of a softer rubber that stays pliable in the cold, they won't disintegrate the moment the sun comes out and suggests booking an appointment once the overnight freezes begin to taper off.

Another tip he provided for drivers is not to swap out washer fluid seasonally. While it's tempting to buy cheaper "summer" washer fluid, Pinelli advises against it.

"I don't recommend it," he said. "In the summer, we use far less fluid. You'll have summer fluid in the lines come fall, and when it drops below zero, your lines freeze."

He suggested using -40 C fluid year-round to avoid a frozen system when the first frost hits in September.

As for other fluids under the hood, Pinelli urged caution regarding brake fluid.

"Brake fluid and transmission fluid are not interchangeable," he said. "If you put any petroleum-based fluid in your brake reservoir, you're going to lose your brakes and cause severe, costly damage."

If you are not 100 per cent sure which cap is which, it might be best to leave it to the professionals, he said.

The auto shop owner suggested a few tasks for vehicle owners who might want to spend a Saturday in the driveway: Clean the carpets, as salt and sand act as abrasives that wear out your car's interior fabric. Have a partner stand behind the car to check brake lights, or back up to a wall and look for the reflection in your mirrors. Inspect the wiper blades and replace them if there are streaks. If your vehicle smells a bit musty, it's time to check the cabin air filter.

"If it's dirty, change it," Pinelli said. "A clean car runs better."

This one's for Dan

A volleyball tournament took place at Hal High on Saturday (April 18) to honour and pay tribute to the late Dan Gimon. About 40 players took to the courts for a little competition, socializing and camaraderie. "Volleyball was always a huge part of his life, from playing in college, university, and then went to coaching and coached here (at Hal High)," Dan's daughter, Natalya Gimon, told The Highlander. "So a lot of the people playing, he's coached and played a huge role in mentoring, and obviously me as well, raising me. So yeah, it's just a baseline for everyone." Tournament organizer Allie Paul said Dan was a father figure to her and wanted to bring people together to honour him. "Dan was volleyball. And I've been thinking about it for a year, and then just finally decided why not bring people together with something that we all love and have in common?" she said.

Home of the Highland Storm

U15 LL Minden Pharmasave

The season opened with a 3-3 record as the team worked to adjust to new teammates and systems. Once they found their footing, the group came together quickly - winning nine of their next 10 games and climbing near the top of the standings ahead of their first tournament.

The Silver Stick tournament proved to be a confidence booster, highlighted by a strong semi-final win. Although the team ran out of steam in the championship game, their performance earned them an invitation to the International Silver Stick.

Heading into the Christmas break, the team competed in the Essa Eagles Christmas Classic, finishing the first half of the season on a high note. Their stellar defensive play carried them all the way to an exciting overtime victory in the championship game - allowing only one goal against throughout the entire tournament.

After the holidays, the team travelled to Pelham for the International Silver Stick. Entering with high expectations, they showed some rust and dropped three close, one-goal games. Despite the results, the tournament was a memorable experience - filled with team bonding and the thrill of facing a team from the U.S.

Down the stretch, the team continued to compete hard, securing fourth place in the regular season and a spot in the "A" division playoffs. Competition was tough, and although they ultimately fell short of the finals, they finished the season in a strong third place out of 14 teams.

It was an exciting year supported by a fantastic group of families. A big thank you goes out to the manager, coaches, trainer, and parents for their commitment and encouragement. Most importantly, thank you to the players. Watching friendships form, confidence grow, and leadership develop made the season truly special. The players should be proud of all they accomplished. (Submitted)

U15 LL The Pepper Mill Steak and Pasta House

The Peppermill Steak and Pasta House U15 local league team had a fantastic season. The team started slowly as players and coaches got to know each other's personalities and skill sets. Through the first six regular season games the team was 3-3.

The team then went on to win their next 10 games in a row entering the Christmas break with a 13-3 record. During the undefeated streak, the team also played in the regional Silverstick tournament. They had a 2-0-1 record in the round-robin before losing in the semifinals.

After the break, the team worked hard to secure a third-place finish and a spot in the tier one playoff pool. The playoffs had the team playing in tight, hard fought, high-intensity games finishing with a 1-5 record but a goal differential of minus seven.

The players' hard work and never-quit attitude helped them win a bunch of close games this year. The coaching staff is very proud of the season they had. (Submitted)

Hal High to bring Fahrenheit 451 to life

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students are set to bring Ray Bradbury's classic dystopian tale Fahrenheit 451 to life.

Next week, Grade 11-12 drama students are set to take the stage to tackle the iconic 1953 novel, which still resonates with generations 70 years later. For drama teacher Meghan Mardus, choosing the production for 2026 was about providing a relevant reflection of the current times.

"This story is 70 years old, and Bradbury has managed to create something that has resonated in every era. The themes of fascism, of anti-intellectualism, of the importance of reading, the rise of technology, feelings of detachment and isolation and loneliness, the need for human connection, the need for storytelling," Mardus told The Highlander. "These are all things that are extremely applicable now. And my thought as a teacher was wondering whether the students would pick up on it the same way students in past generations would have."

And it seems that Mardus' students have picked up on the somewhat heavy themes of the book and adapted stage play.

"At first I was a little skeptical because normally we do comedies and stuff like that here," Trevin Bain-Gross explained. "I didn't know how it would be doing a more dramatic, serious play, but now I'm really enjoying it."

The student plays the lead role of protagonist Guy Montag, a fireman whose job was to burn books. However, the character begins to doubt the censorship of his futuristic society. And that's something that Bain-Gross said he can connect with in the 2026 digital age.

"The reason everybody stops reading books and they become illegal, is leisure. Nobody cares about books anymore. There's TV walls... You can just say hi to your family across the country in your living room. But you don't have to do that," the student said. "It's a lot of short-form content, kind of like how TikTok and Instagram reels are. I've actually found that after reading this and playing the character, I've found a newfound love of books for myself."

Sophie Lee, a student who plays a variety of roles on both sides of the issue, also drew parallels to today's time.

"I think that the play really kind of shows like an exaggerated version of what could happen because we are so reliant on technology," she said. "A lot of things that are more slow, like reading books or just spending time with people without technology, has kind of become lost."

While the young actors grapple with portraying their roles, there's a dedicated production crew working to bring the magic to the stage. Fallon Thorn, who manages costumes, props, and set transitions, said there are a lot of moving parts to the production.

"Taking the big couch off has definitely been a feat," she said, describing a scene that takes place in Mrs. Hudson's house. "Taking the couch off and then putting the new couch and sofa in is going to take a minute or two."

As for the special effects, Mardus remained tight-lipped on how the team plans to bring the story to life but promised a "layered" visual experience.

When asked to sum up the show in just three words, students described the experience as "exciting" to "enlightening," and even "eye-opening."

The production of Fahrenheit 451 will take place at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion on April 30, May 1, and May 2 at 7 p.m. The entry fee is a recommended donation of $11, but all donations are welcome. Due to the mature themes, the play is recommended for those 13 years or older.

Mardus encourages the community to come out to support the arts and drama class.

"I think people won't expect a high school class production to be as good as this is going to be," she said.

EVERY SALE HAS A STORY

Baumgartner Realty Group demonstrated remarkable efficiency throughout the sale of my property. Linda maintained open lines of communication, regularly updating me on every step of the process. Her approach ensured that I always felt informed and engaged, making the entire experience smooth and reassuring.

-C. Nilsson, Google Review

A big thank you goes to Linda Baumgartner and her team for their expert advice and service. Linda was a pleasure to work with and was professional and knowledgeable in handling the sale of our cottage. We can fully endorse Linda Baumgartner and her team for their integrity, honesty and commitment to our sale.
