Men who drove excavator into lake fined

By Lisa Gervais

Two Haliburton men – who illegally used an excavator last summer to remove woody debris and aquatic vegetation along the Lipsy Lake shoreline – have been convicted and fined for unlawful use of machinery on lake shore lands.

The Ministry of Natural Resources said on May 22 that Patrick Mark and Jonathan Mark of Haliburton were fined $2,000 each after pleading guilty to unlawfully dredging shore lands without a permit.

The Ontario Court of Justice heard that on Aug. 11, 2025, the Marks were operating an excavator on the shore of Lipsy Lake, in Dysart et al, north of Haliburton.

“While attempting to remove woody debris and aquatic vegetation along the shoreline, the excavator was driven into the waters of Lipsy Lake,” the MNR said.

They added the lakebed was scraped and dredged using the heavy machinery, without the men having obtained a permit.

“Witnesses observed the excavator in the water and immediately reported the incident to the ministry TIPS line. The ministry’s district staff responded to the incident, completing a damage assessment before handing the investigation over to conservation officers,” the ministry said last Friday.

Justice of the Peace, Joel Kulmatycki, heard the case in the Ontario Court of Justice, City of Kawartha Lakes, Feb. 24.

Incident used for public education

There was no remediation order associated with the conviction.

As the incident happened in Dysart et al, chief building official Karl Korpela said their bylaw enforcement officer conducted a joint investigation with the MNR and, "it was determined that this was outside of our jurisdiction as all of the work was completed below the high-water mark."

Haliburton County master gardener Carolyn Langdon told The Highlander that two weeks ago, she was able to stop a person in mid-destruction from doing a similar thing. She said she convinced the man to return the shoreline elder bushes and soil from the lake back to approximately where it was.

Frank Figuli of U-Links. File.

Check before you remove

With the recent conviction and fine, and Langdon's experience, U-Links program coordinator Frank Figuli said it's a good reminder for full-time and seasonal residents about the do's and don'ts of shoreline health.

"From an ecological standpoint, shoreline and near shore areas are some of the most sensitive and productive habitats within an aquatic system. People typically perceive aquatic vegetation and woody debris as a nuisance or a hinderance to enjoying the lake. But they truly do provide important ecological functions like fish habitats, shoreline stabilization, erosion resistance, nutrient cycling, and just overall benefits to water quality protection."

Figuli said they have done an aquatic plant inventory of Lippy Lake, indicating an absence of invasive plant species.

He said using heavy equipment, such as an excavator, in a lake below the high-water mark can result in sediment disturbances, possible destruction of habitat, lead to shoreline destabilization – and can impact other properties and the larger lake ecosystem.

He said people should use their lake associations as a resource.

"Cooperation with lake associations should be front of mind, particularly because they are working with organizations such as the Haliburton County Master Gardeners, U-Links, Abbey Gardens, etc. You can get more informed decision-making potential by checking in versus just going off on your own."

The Highlander asked the MNR how one obtains a permit, and how it ensures work is done properly. We did not have a response as of press time.

Minden Hills looking for flood victims

The Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing (MMAH) is looking for owners of 10-12 private properties in Minden Hills to gauge damage from April flooding.

The township said this week that a provincial disaster assessment team will be in the community for one day, likely in the first half of June. They are looking to get a representative sample of damage. However, no eligibility or funding decisions will be made during the visit.

"In determining whether to activate the Disaster Recovery Assistance for Ontarians (DRAO) program, the MMAH is looking to assess damage within the township following the April flood event," the municipality said.

DRAO is a provincial program that, if activated by the MMAH, helps eligible private property owners with essential clean-up and repair costs after a natural disaster.

If the program is activated, insurance must be used first. Assistance focuses on essential repairs and clean-up.

To qualify, it must be your primary residence, so cottages and seasonal properties are not eligible; small businesses; properties with damage caused by river/creek overflow or overland flooding; properties with damage to essential components (e.g., furnace, hot water tank, structural elements); properties affected only by sewer backup or with only minor damage are not recommended for assessment. The owner must consent to the visit.

If you are willing to have your property considered e-mail flood2026@mindenhills.ca or call 705-286-1260 ext. 504 by June 3.

The township will select properties that meet the MMAH property criteria; are within the flood zone; and are available on the set date. (Lisa Gervais)

Front-line social workers hit picket line

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Nearly 400 community and social workers in Peterborough, Lindsay, and Haliburton walked off the job on Monday (May 25), and joined a coordinated province-wide strike of 4,500 public sector employees.

Members of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) Local 358 are striking against Community Living Trent Highlands. The workers are demanding a 6.5 per cent retroactive wage increase and a strict “no layoffs” guarantee following the repeal of Ontario’s unconstitutional Bill 124, which capped public sector wage increases at one per cent.

Direct provincial ministry staff received financial remedies after the wage-cap legislation was struck down, but community-based public service sectors were excluded.

“Because the cost of living keeps going up, the time is now,” local union president Jessica Bushey told The Highlander.

The Local 358 president said that even top-earning, long-term staff who have specialized degrees are having to take on secondary jobs or use food banks to make ends meet.

“We have members going to the food bank to not only pick up stuff for the folks we support because they can’t afford it either, but neither can we,” Bushey said. “There’s something wrong here, right?”

The union boss noted that, according to the financial accountability officer, her sector faces an ongoing $1.5 billion provincial funding shortfall. Bushey said workers report that the underfunding directly impacts vulnerable residents, adding that some supported individuals are left with food budgets of just $14 a day.

In a statement to The Highlander, the provincial government said it has “made historic investments in the development services sector, including nearly $4 billion this year, an increase of $1.6 billion since we took office in 2018 to provide people with access to the services they need, when they need them.

“While collective bargaining is a matter between the employer and the union, we expect every service provider to have strong contingency plans to protect residents and ensure their care is never disrupted,” a spokesperson said.

The labour dispute faced a critical deadline this week, when Community Living Trent Highlands forced a final offer vote through the Ontario Labour Relations Board. Local union leadership fiercely urged members to vote down the proposal.

“They’re trying to get us off the strike line, but their deal comes with layoffs,” Bushey said. “We shouldn’t have to fund a wage increase with the blood of our own members.”

Bushey said she’s concerned about the health and safety of the vulnerable people the workers care for during the job action, noting that the specialized care is being handled by temporary workers.

OPSEU launched a family landing page on its website to support affected households, and the results of the OLRB vote will be posted on the local’s public Facebook page.

Health unit to start testing beaches

Lakelands Public Health is launching its annual beach water monitoring program starting June 15, helping residents and visitors stay safe while enjoying local beaches across the region.

Throughout the summer, LPH staff will monitor water quality at 76 municipally-owned and operated public beaches across the County of Haliburton, City of Kawartha Lakes, Northumberland County, and the City and County of Peterborough.

Water samples are tested for E. coli bacteria, an indicator of potential contamination and increased risk of illness.

New this year, the health unit is installing updated signage at beaches across the region to make water conditions easier to understand. The signs use a clear, three-colour system: green: safe for swimming; yellow: swimming not advised; and red: beach closed.

“Regular beach water monitoring helps protect the health of our communities by identifying potential risks and sharing timely information,” said Bernie Mayer, environmental health manager with LPH.

Swimming in contaminated water can lead to gastrointestinal illness, skin rashes, and eye, ear, nose, or throat infections.

Residents and visitors are encouraged to check posted signage and LakelandsPH.ca/BeachCheck before swimming, and avoid entering the water during, and for at least 48 hours after, heavy rainfall.

In addition to regular monitoring, LPH reminds the public to watch for bluegreen algae blooms, which can pose health risks. Suspected blooms should be reported to the Ministry of the Environment, Conservation and Parks (MECP) Spills Action Centre at 1-866-663- 8477.

Beach water test results are available online throughout the summer season, running until Aug 31. (Lisa Gervais)

Building destroyed at Haliburton Biochar

By Mike Baker

Haliburton Forest Biochar management is still assessing damages after an early morning fire at its Kennaway Road facility May 22 took out one of the business' production buildings.

Malcolm Cockwell, managing director of Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve – the parent company of Biochar, told The Highlander the blaze broke out around 1:30 a.m. No injuries were reported.

“Efforts to secure the site and investigate the incident are ongoing. The extent to which the incident will disrupt Haliburton Forest Biochar’s operations is yet to be determined,” Cockwell said.

Introduced in 2016, the division uses leftover wood chips, shavings and powder from the Forest’s sawmill operations to produce biochar – a highly-porous charcoal-like substance primarily used to improve soil health and capture carbon. Acting like a sponge, biochar helps soils retain water and store nutrients.

It’s also used in manufacturing, replacing fossil fuel products like carbon black and coal coke during the production of bioplastics, green metals and other materials.

Stacey Parish, deputy fire chief with the Dysart department, said the fire call came into the station at 1:35 a.m., with first responders arriving at 1:55 a.m. She said 22 firefighters from three departments – Dysart, Algonquin Highlands and Highlands East – tackled the blaze, with officials on-scene for 11 hours.

While the fire was reported to the Ontario Fire Marshal, Parish said there’s no concern for public safety.

“Nothing to be concerned about as it is a natural product,” Parish said.

Jim Demetriou from the fire marshal’s office said an investigation is underway.

“At this time, the incident remains under active investigation and there is no information available to share. The Office of the Fire Marshal is unable to provide further comment while the investigation is ongoing,” Demetriou said.

Cockwell confirmed clean-up is underway. The fire is the first major incident at the site since Haliburton Forest invested $10 million to expand the division in 2022. The Ontario government pitched in an additional $4.6 million last year to support a transition into engineered biochar, opening the door for more growth in advanced manufacturing.

Habitat seeks help with loan

By Mike Baker

Habitat for Humanity Peterborough and Kawartha Region is seeking a $12.5 million loan from Infrastructure Ontario to help pay for its planned 35-unit affordable housing build on Peninsula Road in Haliburton.

CEO Susan Zambonin was at County council May 27 to request the upper tier reach-out to provincial officials on Habitat's behalf.

"It would be construction financing for up to three years. Affordable housing projects can be considered for this type of loan," Zambonin told council. "This would help us to have a low-interest loan, as opposed to going through the bank and only getting 60 per cent of what we need as a construction mortgage.

"This is one way the County can help us without costing you anything," she added.

Council did not make a decision, instead directing staff to report back on the request at a future meeting.

Habitat is partnering with County-based non-profit Places for People (P4P) on the project. While Habitat is handling construction, P4P has committed to purchasing 15 of the 35 units, which it intends to offer for rent at below-market rates. Habitat will sell the remaining 20 units to the public through its homeownership program.

To qualify, Zambonin said applicants require a household income that supports homeownership but is less than $95,000 a year, no outstanding debt, and a credit score of 600 or more. People must secure an initial mortgage through an eligible credit union, with Habitat making up the difference through a second mortgage.

Through Habitat's model, Zambonin said people never pay more than 30 per cent of their income towards housing costs – which includes insurance, condo fees and property taxes.

All units will be one and two-bedroom, with Zambonin telling The Highlander last fall they will likely be priced under $400,000. The building is slated to be three storeys, with main floor units being mostly accessible. There will be an elevator for people on higher floors.

Planning is well underway with Habitat hiring an architect, Neil Campbell from Aside Architects, and a construction manager, Haliburton resident Travis Braun from Braun Custom Builds. Campbell has worked with Habitat on previous builds, including a recent 41-unit development in Peterborough.

Zambonin said she had a pre-consultation meeting with County and Dysart et al staff last week and hopes to finalize building permits this fall, with the project expected to break ground in 2027.

She's been spending a lot of time in the County since the build was announced last September, making connections with local tradespeople who will help bring the units to life.

"Haliburton has been an incredibly supportive and welcoming community and we at Habitat look forward to breaking ground and launching a build that will offer much-needed affordable ownership and rental units to the County," she said.

Bunkie auction

Fundraising efforts are now well underway to help P4P pay its share, with the non-profit's founder, Fay Martin, saying it will likely be millions of dollars.

Local developer Paul Wilson has already committed $500,000 to P4P's cause, part of the proceeds from selling the land on Peninsula Road to Habitat for $1.2 million last year. After bringing in just shy of $60,000 at its annual 'sleeping in cars' event in March, P4P is back at it again with a bunkie auction, running until Canada Day.

Launching May 16, people can bid on a seven-by-10-foot bunkie constructed by volunteers during an annual women's build retreat Habitat hosted in Haliburton last fall. "The completed structure was built with one goal in mind: to support the future of affordable housing in Haliburton County. For all 60 women who participated, it was an opportunity to help build something meaningful. For many, it was their first time swinging a hammer or using construction tools," Zambonin said.

"It takes a village to build a home – and an even bigger village to build 35," she added.

All the materials for the bunkie were provided by Habitat, who donated the finished structure to P4P.

The bunkie is valued at $7,500, with the top bid as of press time $4,000. People have until 11:55 p.m. June 30 to register their interest. The winning bid will be announced by P4P on Canada Day.

"Whether it's storage, a guest bunkie or a creative retreat, this is your chance to add something truly unique to your property," said P4P president Susan Tromanhauser. "The structure is solid, thoughtfully crafted and full of potential. Finish it your way and make it your own."

P4P said it will deliver the bunkie within a 50-kilometre radius of Haliburton Home

Hardware, where it's being stored. Bids can be made virtually through Zeffy or on information cards at select local businesses.

To place a bid, visit www.placesforpeople.ca/news/bid-on-a-bunkie-with-charity-auction-for-places-for-people.

Other projects

Zambonin also delivered an update on Habitat's partnership with the County to develop 60 affordable units at the Wee Care property in Haliburton.

"We've put together a concept of four different buildings where we could stagger the construction, if necessary, to then be able to provide additional daycare space, should the daycare decide that's what they'd like," she said.

The plan calls for two 16-unit buildings and two 12-unit buildings, with space for a new daycare facility. There's currently no timeline for breaking ground.

Zambonin revealed Habitat has also made an offer to purchase the Haliburton Heights timeshare building at 1699 Wigamog Rd.

Their plan is to convert the property into 22 condos for affordable home ownership – six studios, six one-bedroom units and 10 two-bed units. She noted the project would require rezoning and an amendment to Dysart's official plan.

"It's a very well-maintained property... we have met with a few councillors from Dysart and had conversations with the planning department," Zambonin said.

She asked County council to go to Infrastructure Ontario to request a further $3.5 million loan that Habitat will use as acquisition financing. For both, this project and the one on Peninsula Road, Zambonin said Habitat would aim to pay back the loan over three years, once it has recouped money from selling the units.

Hospital foundation lead looking to grow

By Lisa Gervais

The executive director of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation (HHHSF) believes a great deal has been accomplished in her three years, and is now looking for even more professional growth as she returns to school for a Master's degree.

The foundation announced May 25 that Melanie Klodt Wong is stepping down from her role.

Board chair, David Blodgett, thanked Klodt Wong for more than three years of service, saying, "her leadership has contributed to the strong community support we are fortunate to receive and to the very successful 'Here for You in the Highlands' campaign.

Klodt Wong was at the helm for fundraising more than $6 million for a CT scanner and mammography unit.

Klodt Wong told The Highlander this week, "I have worked with so many great people and learned so many things, and we have accomplished a ridiculous amount."

She is proud of her work with HHHSF, seeing what volunteers have done with the Matt Duchene charity golf classic. She loves radiothon, and its grassroots community support.

She added she is leaving the foundation in a good place, with a strong board. She noted Haliburton Highlands Health Services has a new CEO, so it's a good time to transition. HHHS appointed Jack Hutchison as its president and chief executive officer, effective March 30.

"And, now, I need growth. I want to do more things," Klodt Wong said.

She will soon be commencing her Master's in philanthropy and not-for-profit leadership at Carleton University. It is a two-year program. She and partner, Wilson Klodt Wong, are staying in Haliburton County.

She is keen to learn more about how philanthropy in Canada works, noting it is very different than other countries, such as the U.S., U.K. and Australia.

"We're not all the same. For example, Canada has the best tax benefits for giving in the world, and yet fewer Canadians are getting tax receipts. The other major benefit in Canada is capital gains."

Donating highly appreciated assets directly to a registered charity allows you to eliminate capital gains tax while claiming a charitable tax receipt for the full fair market value. This provides a significantly higher tax benefit than selling the asset first and donating the cash proceeds.

She will graduate in 2028 and hopes the theory, on top of the practical experience she has had, will set her up well for her next role.

One thing remains the same, however.

"My favourite thing about doing this work is connecting someone who wants to make a difference to something that needs that. And when you put those two things together, it's an amazing thing."

Blodgett added, "all of us on the foundation board extend our sincere thanks to Melanie and wish her every success in her future endeavours.

"The foundation's board of directors is actively preparing for the transition and remains focused on the important work of supporting exceptional health care in our community.

"We thank the community for your ongoing generosity and support."

Why The Highlander is launching an online app

By Simon Payn

This week, The Highlander is launching a news and information app for Haliburton County. Let me tell you why – and how you can benefit from it.

Three years ago, Meta – the owner of Facebook and Instagram – banned Canadian media companies from posting to its platforms. Overnight, The Highlander, along with every other newspaper in the country, couldn't reach people with up-to-the-minute news and information.

There are lots of good things about social media. But there are bad things, too. And once this ban was put in place, the quality of information on Facebook and Instagram deteriorated. Trustworthy news was replaced by rumour...and worse. We saw that happening in Haliburton County, with several cases of false information quickly accelerating into anger and division.

That's terrible for our community. Media companies – The Highlander included – made a mistake by relying on social media platforms to spread urgent information. Social media companies are run by people in Silicon Valley who don't care about Haliburton County. They certainly couldn't find it on a map. Their motivations are the opposite of the well-being of this place, and contrary to our mission to tell the story of Haliburton County.

This week, we are changing that with the launch of Hi. It's our news and information app for Haliburton County. There will be no misinformation, no trolls, no AI slop, no tech bros. Just the Highlands.

When you visit (thehighlander.app) you'll see it looks like Facebook. But it's different. There are no algorithms designed to hook you on the app. Instead, the posts are purely chronological. It doesn't track your location, or you, or what you read.

There are also no comments allowed.

We realize you might disagree with this last point. You might claim we are trying to control the narrative of Haliburton County. And to some degree we are. Our reporters – Lisa, Mike and Adam – are trained journalists. This means they follow a set of rules so that to the best of their ability, the information you read on The Highlander is true. They verify their sources. They check facts. Social media doesn't, which is why you get information that is wrong or harmful.

That's not to say they never make a mistake. They're human, after all. But they're accountable. They have email addresses which are printed in the paper. The Highlander has an office in Haliburton village. You see our reporters at events and in the grocery store. And when they make a mistake, they fix it. The same can't be said for social media companies.

For all these reasons, Hi has a slogan: It's nicer here. We already know it's nicer in Haliburton County because of the people who live here. We think the app will be nicer, too. It will be safe, trustworthy, accountable. Nicer.

How to use the app

While you can read the app on your laptop or desktop, the best way is to visit it on your cellphone. Go to thehighlander.app and you will see it. On your first visit, you will get a message encouraging you to install the app on your phone. Click this and the app will appear on your home screen so you can easily find it again.

You don't need to create an account to use the app. But if you do, there are two benefits. First, you can choose which categories you want to see. Second, you can get notifications on your phone.

There's a breaking news category, so anytime there is something urgent and important happening in the County, such as a road closure or school bus cancellations, you can get notified. To create an account, just follow the links on the screen.

Who can post

We are offering posting accounts to verified not-for-profits, municipalities, schools, police, and health and service organizations. Saving prom

Dear editor,

On Saturday evening, a tree fell in the forest and many people heard it.

Dates were made, dresses purchased, hair done, makeup on, shoes shined, ties tied, decorations up, food being prepped and as the young adults arrived to enjoy their evening of prom celebration, a tree fell and the power went out.

One of the many benefits of living in a small town is everyone knows someone. In this case, the principal had a friend at Hydro One. Calls were made and literally within minutes plans were put in place to try and save prom.

It was a long shot. Power lines were opened to prevent feedback; other lines were closed to create a path for hydro to flow around the downed lines and jumpers put in place to get the power to the prom. Within an hour, the final switch was flipped, fingers crossed and the lights came on. Huge cheers were heard from the students with many thanks to the hydro workers.

I personally would like to say thank you to the hydro crews that were on site Saturday night. I witnessed these dedicated employees work in the cold rain, literally running from location to location in a gargantuan effort to save prom.

I would also like to thank the teachers, chaperones and volunteer helpers, who with the Sir Sam's team, created backup plans and kept everything very positive. Lastly, a big thank you and congratulations to the students attending prom. This was your night and you took the delays and changes in stride. All in all, it was a night to remember.

Lives at risk

Dear editor,

It will be interesting to hear what Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock Member of Provincial Parliament Laurie Scott has to say about the fact that now that speed cameras have been removed, the number of speeders has increased dramatically as per the recent Toronto Star article.

Premier Doug Ford's decision to remove speed cameras before any solution was in place has resulted in the predicted consequences.

Lives are now at risk because of him.

SAWDUST STORIES

Every day is a step

There's a labyrinth in my mind that I walk, reminding me life is about each step.

Some will be easy. Some will be hard when I need more effort to move forward. When I look too far ahead, I lose sight of the process, focusing on the horizon instead of the step in front of me.

The beauty of peace comes from fulfilment, finding satisfaction in the effort, and meaning in the result, even without victory. True triumph lies in transformation; it rises above winning.

Every day is a step.

Most of us will spend our lives working in one form or another.

It's easy to lose oneself to a daily grind, running on autopilot for much of a week, getting lost in distraction, whether by a screen or despondence.

Be proud of your work, your life. Feel excited about the next day, the next week, the next month, the next year.

The culmination of efforts becomes something larger than ourselves.

Legacy isn't what most set out to achieve. It happens over weeks, months, years, and decades.

I never set out to create a legacy when I came to Haliburton County. It came with the newspaper job, writing about and photographing life here.

My two decades working in journalism taught me respect for quality, attention to detail, and the importance of contributing to a community. The Highlands is my home and working for the newspaper allowed me to write about its neighbours, friends and stakeholders with care. Every line etched into memory, preserving the community's history as it lived.

The term legacy carries weight, typically associated with well-known figures of industry, social movements or countries, but anyone can create one. It's more than ego. It comes from care. From contributing to the lives of others. Like footprints in the sand, we leave our mark for however long and then they're gone. If it has made an impression that lasts, it's a signature to a contract of substance that enriches the lives of others. It hasn't quite been a year for me in construction, but the buildings I've worked on will stand as a similar testament to the work I contributed – a living legacy for a life lived. As I develop my building skills, even small efforts become contributions and opportunities to leave my mark – stained boards, painted spindles, drip caps, a stone fireplace. Each piece matters because I cared.

"I have led a toothless life. I've never bitten into anything. I was waiting. I was reserving myself for later on. Now, I've just noticed that my teeth are gone." — attributed to Jean-Paul Sartre, source unverified.

What would the 90-year-old me think of me? What would the 10-year-old me think of my life? What would they wish I did more of? My father's life has given me a quiet answer to that question.

Seeing my father in his twilight years, I see a man that led an honest life where hard work was the bedrock of his legacy.

He can't say he's proud of his life, but I can. I'm proof he existed and embody the qualities of generosity and kindness because of him.

The labyrinth ends for all of us eventually. What matters is how we walked it.

What we leave behind doesn't need to last forever – only long enough to matter.

ALL ABOUT HI, THE HIGHLANDER'S NEW APP

Why we made it

Three years ago, Meta banned Canadian media companies from Facebook and Instagram. Since then, the quality of information on these platforms has deteriorated. Instead of trustworthy news, there is misinformation, anger, and division. We believe that's bad for Haliburton County.

We created this app to solve that problem: to make a space that is just for our community, without the downsides of social media.

What's on it

You'll find verified, accurate news from our reporters, including breaking news alerts. You will also find information from local not-for-profits, service organizations and municipalities. The feed is in strict chronological order – there's no algorithm to track or manipulate you.

How to get it

The best way is to go to thehighlander.app on your cellphone. On your first visit, you'll get a message encouraging you to install the app on your phone. Click this and the app will appear on your home screen so you can easily find it again.

How to use it

You don't need to create an account to use the app. But if you do, there are two benefits. First, you can choose which categories you want to see. Second, you can get notifications on your phone. There's a breaking news category, so anytime there is something urgent and important happening in the county, you can be notified. To create an account, just follow the links on the screen.

Why you can't comment on it

We know you might enjoy commenting on Facebook. But a downside of comments is that misinformation can spread. Without moderation, which is an impossible job for us, the value of the app would be lost. The Highlander's reporters are trained journalists, which means they follow rules so that what they post is as accurate as possible. They are also accountable because they live and work in our community. If they make a mistake, readers tell us – and we fix it. We hope that this approach will create an environment that is useful and pleasant.

How to advertise on Hi

We will be funding the app by offering a limited number of spots to local advertisers who want to reach people in Haliburton County. For more information, contact Aidan (aidan@thehighlander.ca).

How to give us feedback

Email Adam (adam@thehighlander.ca) or stop by our office in Haliburton village.

It's nicer here

Hi has a slogan: It's nicer here. Imagine getting all your important news and information about Haliburton County from a trustworthy source. No algorithms, no trolls, no lies. Just 100% pure news and information. It's calm and friendly. It's real. Just like our beautiful Highlands. It's nicer here.

Tina Gilbert is the owner of Fresh & Co. Home and Property. Submitted.

Business expands to home and property

By Lisa Gervais

Tina Gilbert started Fresh & Clean Housekeeping in 2018, but quickly realized she was doing a lot more than tidying homes.

A licensed private nurse, she was helping folks with other things around the house; ranging from picking up and putting away groceries, to reminding elderly people to take their medications. She also called other service providers to meet customer needs, such as shovelling walkways.

"One of my clients actually asked me if I had ever kept track of how much stuff I farmed out, things such as leaf blowing decks. Two years ago, I did, and I thought 'I need to redo something because that's literally a whole other full-time job that I've given to other people'."

She has rebranded her business to Fresh & Co. Home and Property, expanding services across Haliburton County and Kawartha Lakes.

Gilbert said the name change reflects an even greater commitment to serving homes, families, and the broader community.

Gilbert told The Highlander the company had grown steadily through word-of-mouth referrals and a reputation for reliability, discretion, and exceptional care.

"Fresh & Co. Home and Property will continue to provide the detailed housekeeping services clients know and trust, while formally expanding into property maintenance and home support services," she said.

Gilbert added the expanded offerings include: lawn care, trimming, snow removal, seasonal cottage checks, garbage removal, light maintenance, errands, medication reminders, senior check-ins, post-hospital support, respite services, and practical home assistance for families.

"Our goal has always been to provide dependable care. Now, we're doing that on a broader scale."

The business owner said the rebrand is much more than a name change. She said it reflects her long-term investment in the community. "We are expanding thoughtfully, creating meaningful employment, introducing staff benefits, and building a company that supports both the families we serve and the people who work with us."

The company's growth includes expanded team hours and the introduction of staff benefits, reinforcing Gilbert's commitment to supporting local workers and strengthening the region's service economy.

As services grow, the company is actively recruiting additional team members who share its values of integrity, consistency, and community care.

Gilbert said she would like to see her team grow to three full-timers excluding herself, and at least half-a-dozen part-timers.

She said she has always wanted to create full-time, year-round work for people in the County, versus seasonal jobs. She added she'd like to think her company is supporting seniors to age in place better, by having the supports they need.

Gilbert said lots of people have family and friends around, but some are busy working and have their own family commitments. She added no two clients or their needs, are the same, so they customize the cleaning and home and property care.

"At the end of the day, this business is about people," Gilbert added. "It's about helping seniors remain safe and comfortable at home, supporting busy families, caring for homes and cottages year-round, and making life a little easier for our neighbours. We're proud to grow in a way that truly strengthens the community we call home."

Dying for readers to crack new book

By Lisa Gervais

Readers have been enthralled with crime, and true crime, for as long as the genre has existed and part-time Haliburton resident, Hope Thompson, has added to the bookshelves.

Thompson recently published Dark Thoughts & Other Stories: a collection of 11 crime stories, with many having a “noir quality.”

She described it as, “set on city streets from the 1930s and 50s, to the present day and beyond, these stories bristle with the grit of noir. While some are lighter, and others darker, all are about people forced by circumstance to escape their situation - or die trying.”

Thompson, who splits her time between Haliburton village and Toronto, said she has always been interested in noir. “So, these stories draw on that. They also draw on the cozy crime stories; say Agatha Christie; a little bit of everything. Some of the stories are historical, some are present day.”

Thompson said the short stories are mostly driven by “outsider characters; like single women, unmarried women, people who are kind of navigating patriarchy in some way; navigating the world from an outsider space. It’s very different from crime stories where it’s the male detective as the main lead.”

The author noted, “characters are cornered, caught and facing their own demise.” For example, an advice columnist receives a letter from a murderer. A drifter obsesses over a serial killer. A painter contemplates her final brush stroke - with death.”

As to why people love reading crime and true crime, Thompson said she thinks it’s partly escapism.

“The fact the world is in such a horrific place right now. It’s, ironically, going to a story that involves murder and what have you, as a form of escapism. It almost always is, and has been, since the invention of the genre. It’s always had this popularity and is the highest-selling genre.”

This is Thompson’s first book of short stories. She is also working on a novel. Add to that, a true crime project with Ellen White of the podcast Whereabouts Unknown.

Thompson has worked in film and television, including writing for the CBC sketch comedy hit Baroness Von Sketch Show. She has a future project with a production company in the Yukon. She also does freelance work to help pay the bills. Thompson has also taught courses for Haliburton School of Art + Design.

Asked how she keeps track of it all, she said it comes down to time management. “I’ve got a white board with a lot of deadlines, some of which I have missed. I keep writing up lists and trying to strike things off.”

Dark Thoughts & Other Stories is available on Amazon, and at Master’s Book Store In Haliburton.

Thompson also plans to bring the book to Bookapalooza in Minden June 20. She hopes to plan another book reading event while in town for that. “I’m looking forward to being at my first Bookapalooza.”

ADVERTORIAL

Can't live, if living is without you

It's the trout lilies that tell me spring is here.

Not long after the snow melts I notice their dark green leaves with brown spots. Which is how trout lilies get their name.

And shortly after that, some of these plants produce brave yellow flowers.

Trout lilies spread thanks to ants. Before bees and butterflies are around, ants are busy. Maybe you noticed them in your kitchen this spring? The trout lily wraps its seed in a fat-rich packet, which the ant takes to its nest to feed its larvae.

The ants then chuck the seed in the colony's waste dump, which is rich in nitrogen. The perfect place for a new trout lily to grow.

It's like the trout lily pays the ant in food to spread its seed.

Stems and bees

The dead stems of mountain mint, aster and milkweed are still standing at my Lucas House garden in Haliburton, even as the new growth is starting to show.

During the season, mother bees bore their way into the stems, lay eggs and leave a ball of pollen and nectar for the emerging larvae, which then spend a cozy winter in the stem's cavity. They'll emerge when the weather gets consistently warm.

Small carpenter bees are suited to boring into stems. And stems are suited to providing nests for carpenter bees. The bees have a creche and the plants have pollinators for next summer.

Columbines and hummingbirds

I heard my first hummingbird last week. It's a sign of the times that I thought it was a drone. But then it hovered past me. Perhaps it was on its way to some wild columbine. I planted a bunch of this on my property a few years ago and it's starting to spread.

Columbine's draw is its bright red flowers. These open up just in time for the hummingbirds' arrival, and they're adapted so hummingbirds can insert their beaks and lap up the nectar. Everything about columbine says "I'm for hummingbirds": the bright red colour, the tubular shape, the length of the flower and the way it curves.

The hummingbird gets fed after a long journey north and the columbine gets pollinated. Over time, flower and bird have got closer to each other, more precisely matched. A stronger partnership.

Milkweeds and monarchs

I picked up some swamp milkweed from Haliburton Micromeadows on the weekend. They were year-old plants and the stems were emerging, just as they are back at my HQ.

The monarch butterflies aren't here yet but when they arrive, the milkweed will be ready.

Those butterflies aren't the same ones that were here last year - they're two or three generations on from that. When they get here, I will see eggs, caterpillars, chrysalises, and adult butterflies on the milkweeds through the summer.

Milkweed is poisonous to most animals: it produces a toxin that stops the heart. That deters herbivores from eating the juicy leaves.

But the monarch has adapted to the poison and uses the toxicity to its advantage because it now becomes poisonous, too. Its bright orange colour is a warning to other creatures - I'm dangerous, don't eat me!

Milkweed and monarch are in an arms race. The milkweed gets more poisonous and the monarch adapts to it and gets more poisonous, too. Both get safer.

And both are locked in a relationship that's lasted millions of years.

Haliburton Highlands Secondary School celebrated the class of 2026 during prom on Saturday at Sir Sam's Ski/Ride. While the celebration hit a small snag at the start, with a power outage across Eagle Lake, the party eventually got underway about an hour behind schedule once hydro crews worked to get the lights back on.

Soaring to gold

The girls' soccer program at Hal High scored an impressive double win last week, with both the junior and senior teams securing the Kawartha A championship. Playing in Norwood May 19, the junior team defeated Campbellford 2-0 in the final to be crowned champions, with the senior side coming from behind to beat the host school 3-2 in the senior final. Both teams qualified for the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association (COSSA) finals, which were played in Norwood May 26, but lost in the semi-finals to end their season. (Mike Baker)

Haliburton Home and Cottage Show

Lots of new faces at show

By Mike Baker

Despite being involved on the organizing side for more than 30 years, Andy Glecoff still gets excited when the annual Haliburton Home and Cottage show comes around.

Now into its 47th year, the annual spring event takes over the Haliburton Curling Club and A.J. LaRue Arena May 29 to 31. Glecoff said it's another sellout, with 150 vendors confirmed – including 29 first-time attendees.

"We've been sold out and fully booked for eight weeks. There were 54 new registrations from people that have never been to the show before, but because of the returning vendors we could only fit so many of them in," Glecoff said. "We have seen some turnover, but this show has gained a great recognition and reputation in the industry. Businesses want to be involved."

Promoted as a one-stop shop for Highlands property owners looking to spruce up their home or cottage – or find some shiny new toys to play with, Glecoff said this year's show features everything from local contractors and tradespeople to home décor specialists, landscapers, watersport providers and those working in the beauty, travel and alternate energy industries.

Popular returning vendors include Home Hardware, Emerson Lumber, Kegel Heating and Cooling and outdoor exhibitors NorTech, RPM Marinas, Curry Motors and Ski-Mazing Watersports.

The featured guest is also a familiar face – County-based artist David Alexander Risk. Renowned for his plein air paintings of wildlife and nature captured live, Risk is a big deal in the art world. He has paintings on display at several public and private collections, including at Casa Loma in Toronto and Buckingham Palace in London, England.

"David is going to have an active booth where I think he'll be painting live. He's also provided us with an exclusive original piece that will be the first prize in our entry draw," Glecoff said, noting everyone who pays the Artist David Alexander Risk will be at the home show. File.

$5 admission will be in with a chance of winning. Other prizes include a weekend getaway to Buttermilk Falls Resort and two luxurious camping chairs, donated by Glecoff's Family Store.

With up to 3,000 people expected to attend over the three days, Glecoff said the Haliburton show has become one of the best in Ontario.

"We have folks who run the circuit – so they go to shows in Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Barrie and Orillia and they say we stand on our own, that this is one of the most successful shows anywhere," Glecoff said.

There will be opportunities for people to keep on top of their health and hygiene, too. Glecoff said Your Hometown Dentist is bringing a travelling trailer, with staff offering free tooth examinations, while Hear Canada is bringing a device that will let people peer inside their own ear.

The popular on-site doggy daycare service, where people can leave their four-legged friends while they wander the exhibitor halls, is back, while Glecoff said the new-and-improved kitchen at the curling club will be open for orders. The snack bar at the arena will also be open.

The show runs Friday from 3 to 8 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Funds reinvested in curling

The show is organized by volunteers from the Haliburton Curling Club, which uses the proceeds to finance things like its 'learn to curl' and youth training programs.

"We focus on development as much as possible. We invest heavily in our youth curling program. Kids are bused in every week for sessions," home show spokesperson Andy Glecoff said. "We've developed many reputable Canadian curlers over the years, including Jacob Dobson, Liam Little, Jessica Byers, Owen Nicholls and Connor Duhaime."

Dobson and Nicholls are national college and university champions who have also had a taste of the pro game – Dobson in 2024, when he competed at the Pointsbet Invitational against Brad Gushue and Nicholls in 2026, appearing at the Ontario Tankard.

Duhaime has also played at the Tankard and in 2021 competed for a spot on Team Canada's Olympic roster.

Little and Byers performed well on the collegiate circuit, with Byers now representing the Philippines' national team.

"It's a tremendous program that gives kids a great education on the sport. Curling is growing leaps and bounds in Canada, so this is one of our most important programs," Glecoff said.

Through 'learn to curl', adults can get six weeks of play for a nominal fee. Glecoff said most of the people who sign up go on to become full-fledged members. Money is also used to offset annual fees for curlers, making it more affordable for people to play, and for hosting seminars on various curling skills and tactics, including game strategy, sweeping and throwing.

"We have a pretty dynamic club. There's always lots going on – there's curling every day, pretty much. We run a full schedule Monday to Friday, morning, afternoon and evening," Glecoff said. (Mike Baker)

A fishy move

The Wilberforce FUNraisers Group held its first annual community roadside clean-up day May 23. Fifteen people collected 30 bags of garbage in the hamlet area along County Road 648, with unusual items including a lace bra, watch, umbrella and half of an Ontario road sign. Some of the most common items included cigarette butts and used children's diapers. Recital celebrates spirit

By Lisa Gervais

Haliburton's Skyline Dance Studio will wrap up its season with its year-end recital June 5-7.

Spokesperson, Amanda Conn, said the weekend finale will feature performances from both the recreational and pre-competitive programs.

The recital will take place over four performances at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton.

The year-end show comes after what Conn said was an "extraordinary" 2025-26 competitive season, "marked not only by outstanding competitive achievements, but also by repeated recognition for sportsmanship, kindness, positivity, and team spirit."

Over the course of the season so far, Skyline dancers have taken to the stage 175 times, earning numerous special awards, overall placements, and adjudicator recognitions across multiple competitions.

Most notably, the studio was honoured with three spirit awards - one at every competition attended this season - recognizing the dancers, staff, and families for creating an environment rooted in encouragement, inclusivity, respect, and teamwork.

"As a community-based, not-for-profit studio, these spirit awards mean so much to us," board chair Stef Wood said. "While we are incredibly proud of the competitive accomplishments this season, we are even more proud of the culture our dancers, families and staff continue to create both on and off the stage."

Conn said that throughout the season, competitions repeatedly praised Skyline dancers and families for their positivity backstage, supportive audience presence, and uplifting attitude toward fellow competitors.

"The studio's commitment to creating a safe, encouraging, and inclusive environment has been a core value since Skyline was established, and this season those values were reflected in every event attended," Conn said.

She added the season also marked a year of growth and evolution for the studio, including welcoming new members to the teaching and choreography team, introducing new training structures, and continuing to challenge dancers artistically and technically.

"Dancers demonstrated tremendous dedication, perseverance, and resilience while continuing to grow as both performers and individuals. At Skyline, we believe dance is about so much more than what happens on stage.

The interpersonal skills, work ethic, leadership, teamwork, kindness, and confidence our dancers displayed this season are achievements that will stay with them long after competition season ends," Conn said.

The studio competed at DanceAttack in Cobourg March 27-29, the Breakthru Dance Challenge in Ottawa, April 17-19, and the Shooting Stars Dance Competition in Huntsville May 15-17; bringing home countless awards.

Conn said while the trophies and placements are worth celebrating, Skyline leadership emphasizes that the season's greatest accomplishment has been the growth of its dancers as compassionate, confident, and supportive young people who continue to excel at their art and sport.

Competition director, Wilson Klodt Wong, added, "the goal was never just to build strong dancers — it was to build strong humans. Technique and training are essential, but the legacy of a studio is built in the quieter moments: encouraging teammates backstage, showing respect to competitors, and leading with kindness. Winning a spirit award shows that others are recognizing the culture we as a team have worked so hard to create together."

Looking ahead to next season, Skyline's pre-competitive auditions for the 2026-27 dance season will be held on May 31. Families interested in auditioning are encouraged to register in advance by May 30 through skylinedancestudio.ca

Tickets for the June 5-7 recital can be purchased through OnStageDirect.ca or at skylinedancestudio.ca

East Wind hits Haliburton

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Jessica Pearson and the East Wind is set to take the stage at the Haliburton Legion on Saturday (May 30), and the audience can expect to be taken on an emotional rollercoaster.

Pearson, the frontwoman of the Ottawa Valley-based trio, and her bandmates have spent the past few years turning heads across the Canadian folk scene. Winner of the 2025 Folk Music Ontario's Performing Artist of the Year award, and nominated for Recording Artist of the Year, the threesome is preparing to bring their highly-praised live performance to the legion on May 30, featuring an opening set by Haliburton's own Jocelyn Regina.

The band, made up of Pearson, Sam Stone, and Malia Rogers, leans into classic country storytelling, Americana, and traditional Celtic sound into an emotionally-charged show.

Speaking to The Highlander, Pearson opened up about the personal history, matriarchal strength, and the vulnerability that fuels the band's uniqueness.

"For myself and for my two bandmates, we have been surrounded by amazing women growing up. All of our moms are just so kind and caring," the singer explained. "My mom and my grandma were massive figures in my life. They taught me about the power of our voices, especially as women, and being able to speak up, the power in it, but also how important it is to keep our voice and to say what we need to and to stand up for each other."

That personal philosophy extends into how Pearson views the music industry, where female acts are faced with limited opportunities with only a handful of festival slots, for example.

"I was raised in a world where, as women, we were taught to compete and compare ourselves to each other," she said.

The singer said that the band channels solidarity in their tracks like Salt the Earth, which speaks to the political climate down south, where "women's voices are being turned off and taken away."

"Salt the Earth is all about how important it is to fight for that, how important it is to stand up for each other in that space," she said.

"We talk about things from the joy and love of community and being together, the privilege of having friendships and relationships that you truly feel loved in," Pearson said. "Then we talk about a lot of things that are hard to talk about."

She went on to explain that songs like Better allowed her to shed the shame and guilt of her late ADHD diagnosis and to choose joy and love instead.

"We try to build a space where people can come in and feel what they want to feel, no more, no less."

As for the band's name, it turns out the east wind is a direct nod to the nature of their music. Pearson recalled a story from a friend on the East Coast whose uncle lost his entire front porch to the east wind during a massive New Brunswick storm.

"The east wind can be so many different things," she said. "It can lightly brush by you and bring a warm breeze, softness, and safety. But it can also be fierce, strong, and powerful. For me, that wind symbolizes our voices. We can be soft and vulnerable, but we are also fierce when we share these stories."

New 'Miijim' exhibit on display in Minden

By Adam Frisk
Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

A new summer exhibit is coming to the Minden Hills Cultural Centre that explores the relationship between food, culture, and the land.

Opening June 2, the exhibit, titled Miijim: Traditional Foods of the Anishinaabeg, focuses on the belief that everything provided by the earth is a gift from the creator. The exhibit was created in partnership with Iskatewizaagegan No. 39 Independent First Nation and the University of Manitoba and is on loan from The MUSE: Lake of the Woods Museum in Kenora.

Township cultural services manager Shannon Kelly explained that for Minden Hills, the exhibit represents a step toward expanding the narrative beyond the history of traditional logging and agricultural settlers.

"If you want to know the history of Haliburton County, obviously you have to start kind of at the beginning, and that is with the First Nations people who were here for thousands of years," she said. "We're really trying to add that to our everyday programming here."

Kelly said the exhibit features large cloth banners displayed across the main building and Nature's Place, which focuses on the collection of food, the processing, and its spiritual importance.

To supplement the exhibit, Kelly said she secured ash-splint and elm bark baskets that were made by elders in the early 1900s, and a birch bark canoe model. These items are also on loan from the Scugog Shores Museum. The exhibit also features a scent station, highlighting four plants sacred to the Anishinaabe: cedar, tobacco, sweetgrass, and sage.

The Miijim exhibit also ties in with the reopening of the Minden boardwalk, where news panels were installed that highlight the First Nations' use of local flora and plants within the area.

"With the boardwalk leading right up to Nature's Place, there's a nice tie-in with that First Nations material as well as the exhibit that we're having on display," Kelly said.

Kelly said she hopes Miijim, derived from the Anishinaabeg word for "food," leaves a lasting impression on how residents and visitors perceive local history and the connection with its Indigenous roots.

"Right now, we hear the land acknowledgment a lot," Kelly said. "I don't want people to just hear it and not understand what it's about. When you hear the land acknowledgement, you shouldn't just hear the words, but understand the heart and soul behind that, and how the local First Nations felt about mother earth."

TRIBUTE

Paul Michael Cummings Tribute

Paul Cummings was born on July 21, 1957 in Pickering, Ont.

He passed away on Jan. 15, 2026 in Victoria, Vancouver Island, B.C.

Paul is survived by his siblings : Carole, Elizabeth, Brenda, Patricia and Michael and pre deceased by siblings : Lorne, Kevin, Michelle and Donald and mother Mary Alice Bates and father Michael Joseph Cummings.

Paul started school at St Francis de Sales in Pickering , Ontario. He continued at the elementary schools in Haliburton, Ontario when his parents moved there in 1968. Paul attended Haliburton High School before attending Laurentian University on Sudbury, Ontario.

Paul travelled to Victoria in the mid 1990's. He lived in Victoria, Sooke and Duncan area.

He participated in various community groups and activities such as the Green Barter System, Near Death Experience (NDE) Society of Vancouver Island, Sooke Lions, peer helper at Sooke Family Resource Society, Brain Injury Society, artistic gyroscope dance, Every Step Counts, coached with Special Olympics ski team, Spirit Bears, electronic publishing, photography, men's groups, personal growth, Reiki, wholistic health, Huntingtons Disease (HD) Society and UBC HD research study.

Some of the sports Paul participated in are hockey, skating, golf, baseball, basketball, lacrosse, pool, sailing, badminton and tennis.

Paul did trades contracts and driving instructor work for employment.

He enjoyed going to music coffee houses, concerts, jazz festivals, plays, IMAX theatre, Victoria boat festival , Victoria inner harbor music and events or just enjoying an ice cream cone on the Beacon Hill Park lookout.

Travelling around Vancouver Island (Duncan , Sooke and Victoria areas) on his motor cycle or in his car was a pleasure Paul enjoyed while taking in the area and having a Timmy's coffee. Also, he enjoyed going for walks and always had to pet and engage with dogs/owners along the way.

He loved reading, and had over 600 books. In particular he enjoyed mystery, sci-fi and wholistic books.

He had a gift when he dialogued with people, he could succinctly summarize things in a one sentence response for others.. Paul's had a spiritual nature and had the intention to be guided by quality harmonious choices. And had an inner drive for fairness and justice.

Paul enjoyed going out to different restaurants and going to the Oak Bay pool. He made many friends on these outings. In his later years, Paul woke up every day glad to be alive and live in the moment. Paul regularly answered the phone 'Paul here'. Maybe, now when you think of Paul you will hear 'Paul here'.

Paul will be greatly missed by many people.

OBITUARY

In Loving Memory of Carol Elizabeth McClay

August 25, 1943 - May 16, 2026

Carol Elizabeth McClay, longtime resident of Eagle Lake, Ontario, passed away peacefully on May 16, 2026, at the age of 82.

Carol spent 38 wonderful years in Eagle Lake before later residing at the long-term care home in Southampton, Ontario. She will be lovingly remembered for her warmth, strength, sense of humour, and the many cherished memories shared with family, coworkers, and friends throughout her life.

Predeceased by her beloved husband, Terry McClay, with whom she shared 41 years together. Carol leaves behind her loving children, Tanya and Jarret (Michelle). She was a proud and devoted grandmother to her grandsons Kyle (Ashley), and Ethan, and her Great grandsons Corbin, Grady and Xilo, they brought her endless joy.

She is also survived by her brother, Ralph (Pat) Nichols, along with extended family and many dear friends.

Carol wished for no formal service or celebration of life. Instead, her family asks that you simply take a quiet moment to remember Carol and reflect on the good times and memories shared with her.

She will be deeply missed and fondly remembered always.

Arrangements entrusted to the Eagleson Funeral Home, Southampton.

OBITUARY

In Loving Memory of Lynn Craigmyle

March 7, 1940 - May 18, 2026

It is with profound sadness and heavy hearts that we announce the peaceful passing of Lynn Craigmyle after a brief stay in the Haliburton Hospital.

Lynn is survived by his partner in crime and "Little Holy", Carole (nee Costain), son Doug (Jackie) and Daughter Dianne "Dizey" (Phil). He will be deeply missed for both his humour and wisdom by his three grandsons, Maxwell (Josie), Bennett and Jake, and by his bonus grandkids Connie (Cam), Rodrigo and Liam.

Lynn fell in love with Haliburton when his parents bought a cottage on the shores of Drag Lake in 1956. He met the love of his life while working in a real estate office in Lindsay. It didn't take long for those two crazy kids to make their way to Haliburton full time. It was here that they raised Doug and Dianne, became deeply rooted in their community and built a beautiful life surrounded by nature and great friends. When not working in Real Estate Lynn would often take "character building" adventures with the kids. Both Doug and Dianne developed a deep love for the outdoors and nature through these adventures.

Lynn loved his family hard. He was a very proud husband, dad and grandpa, making sure he spent time with everyone. You felt like you were the only person that mattered when he gave you his ear.

Unfortunately in 2003, after a short but successful battle with cancer, Lynn's mobility was affected, so some of his adventures had to come to an end. His love of exploring never did. From hours spent by the shores of Dutton Lake in his beloved Haliburton Forest and Wildlife, to listening to the tales of his kids on their global adventures, living life fully was never far from his mind.

Cremation has taken place.

In lieu of flowers, please consider a donation to Snowflake Meadows Rescue (by cheque only), Haliburton Forest and Wildlife (by cheque only) or Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation (HHHSF) in Lynn's honour and can be arranged through the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home Ltd., P.O. Box 427, Minden, Ontario KoM 2Ko.
